Life happens. When tough times come, support from friends and family might not be enough. Sometimes professional help is needed.

If you or your child is suffering from any of the following emotional or behavioral difficulties, you might want to seek professional help:

- Angry outbursts
- Defiance
- Teen rebellion
- Family conflict
- Peer conflict
- Impulsivity/ADHD
- Homework refusal
- Anxiety/phobias
- Depression/grief
- Peer rejection

Professional help may also be needed to improve skill deficits, such as

- Communication
- Social skills
- Toileting/self-care
- Independent living

ADAPT BEHAVIORAL SERVICES

OUR SERVICES

Counseling: Individual & family counseling services are usually provided in your home or over telehealth, however in-school and in-office may be provided, if appropriate.

Behavior Analysis*: In-home & in-school services focus on parents & teachers learning strategies to help the child gain skills and decrease problem behavior. In-office parenting or 1:1 sessions are also available in our Maitland location.

Although the world is full of suffering, it is full also of the overcoming of it.

–Helen Keller
