	Community Relations

Subject: School-Community Relations

Good school-community relations require two-way communication: from school to community, and from community to school.

The Public’s Right to Know

The Board of Education shall encourage the use of all appropriate means for supplying the Community with accurate information about the school. The School Board President shall act as the spokesperson at the Board level.

The Superintendent shall be the central intermediary between the schools and the public and shall be the spokesperson at the Administrative level.

The successful public relations program lies largely in the hands of each District employee. Therefore, it is the responsibility of all employees to be well informed of and follow all District policies and procedures when interacting with the public.
