- c. Driving Question: How do we continue to build a model that reinforces the notion of growth in these characteristics and attributes?

- d. Teacher experience relative to the POG
- e. How can we parlay this experience and learning to our students?
- f. Paralell Pedagogy: Adminstrators, Teachers, Students
- g. Graphic of POG with the charatceristics and attributes visualized
- h. How did we get to this point? Mr. Puracro shares a timline walk through from 2016- present
- i. The power of Paralell Pedagogy: Districts are best when the message is clear that what is good for teachers and adults is what is equally good for students
- j. All roads lead to the POG
- k. August PD feedback was positive and suportive of the work we are trying to do
- l. Dr. Turner asks a question reagrding who will choose the pieces of work that will ultimately go into their senior year portfolio. Mr. Purcaro responds that the goal is that students will be the ones to choose from a robust portfolio that students will be building from grades 7-12.
- m. Mrs. Eichler asks what graduating class will be the first to submit a portfolio. Mr. Purcaro suggest the curent sophomores "Class of 2027" will submit some version of a portfolio that will include reflections on a number of different characteristicts of the POG, likely by the end of their junior year. Some aspects are still being decided with the high school administration. Mr. Purcaro shares that Schoology includes a portfolio feature that will aid students in the work of building a portfolio.
