Lasting Impressions

It can be said that time is a type of canvas — it stretches out beyond the limits of human comprehension. This canvas is by no means barren and untouched, but is a complex living, growing, changing work of art. It is art that is, and always will be "in progress". Everything known to us is part of this canvas. We, too, are painters on this masterpiece.

In the beginning of time, God was the sole artist. As time moved on, He gradually turned the care and painting of the canvas over to us, His most beloved creations. Since then, all human action, deed, thought and emotion have painted that part of the canvas now called History. This completed past masterpiece is there for all to see, to study, to enjoy, and to learn from.

As we move through each day, we paint, by what we say and what we do, on that part of the canvas known as Today. With each passing moment, part of the canvas is completed and left to be unchanged and uncovered. It is in this way that all of us, no matter how insignificant we may seem, make our mark on this world. We paint, in our own unique style, our contribution to History.

Throughout our lives, as throughout the school year, we will go on painting, and, in this way, make our own

Lasting Impressions.

Fun, Friends & Fellowship

The IWA campus is unique — it offers an opportunity for students, faculty and visitors to enjoy a closeness and camaraderie . . . a special spirit of sharing.

Seniors

Andrea Gutierrez

Valedictorian Andrea Gutierrez and Salutatorian Megan Matey led the 1990 seniors academically. They offered messages both nostalgic and challenging to classmates at graduation.

"You Carry Your Pictures in Your Heart"

As I look into this auditorium, I see a room filled with proud parents, excited friends, and relieved teachers . . . if my camera were a miracle machine that could freeze time with every flash, would I want it to be now? Would I want it to be any other of those "memorable" moments? Truthfully, my answer is no. The memories I do wish could be frozen in time, ironically, are those that never were candidates for camera lenses — time that didn't have a pre-determined importance, a carefully planned schedule, or a well-considered invitation list. Rather, they were spontaneous and engaging, personal and shared, but most importantly, life-changing in their own special way . . .

. . . last night I had a dream. I dreamed that I had awakened and all my photographs had disappeared. The frames were empty and the scrapbooks were blank. I cried out to God and asked, "Why did you let this happen?" God smiled and whispered,

"You don't need them. You carry your pictures in your heart."

Megan Matey

"Listen"

Listen . . . Listen to the shouts for independence resounding throughout Lithuania and Eastern Europe . . . Listen to the cries for equality and basic human rights in Central and South America, in South Africa . . . Listen to the triumphant cries of success as yet another European or Asian scientist develops a technological breakthrough . . . Listen to the cries for assistance and compassion from the starving in Africa, in India, in the streets of our own City . . . Now listen to the voice of educated Americans — listen to our voice . . .

The world is in a state of rapid change. People of all nations are fighting for their basic human rights — from the students who gave their lives in Tiananmen Square to the thousands who tore down the Berlin Wall. Yet, listen to our voice . . .

. . . Many people see this exercise — the Commencement — as an end, an end to some of the best years of our lives. But to commence means to begin. And, hopefully, at this Commencement we will begin to share our talents and qualities with the rest of the world.

So listen . . . listen to the potential that lies within you. Then raise your own voice to be heard.
