

News from the West Media Center and Makerspace

Digital Citizenship Week

As we celebrate Digital Citizenship Week, let's work together to foster the importance of digital citizenship with our students. Here are three ideas to extend the conversation at home:

1. Open Communication: Encourage honest conversations with your child about their online experiences. Ask questions, listen, and be non-judgmental to create a safe space for discussing online challenges and choices.
2. Lead by Example: Model positive digital behavior by demonstrating respect, empathy, and responsible use of technology. Your actions speak louder than words, so be a good digital role model for your child.

3. Educate on Privacy and Security: Teach your child the importance of protecting personal information, using strong passwords, and recognizing online threats to ensure they stay safe while navigating the digital world.

As we celebrate Digital Citizenship Week, we must recognize that fostering digital citizenship is a lifelong conversation that we should all openly discuss. Students can stop by the West Media Center this week to pick up a bookmark with five things digital citizens should do. Together, your families and the school can teach our students how to thrive in our digital world.

Students should check their email to get on the waitlist for a West Media Center lunch pass

Attention Parents: Email Mrs. Foutz if you are interested in volunteering at the West Media
Center