What was...

NOW

What is...

“...the merger of globalization and the IT revolution that coincided with the transition from the twentieth to the twenty-first century is changing everything—every job, every industry, every service, every hierarchical institution...This merger has raised the level of skill a person needs to obtain and retain any good job...”

--That Used to Be Us (2011)

Thomas L. Friedman &
Michael Mandelbaum

“Of the 5 billion (adults on Earth),
3 billion tell Gallup they work or want to work...The problem is there are currently only 1.2 billion full-time, formal jobs in the world. There is a...global shortfall of 1.8 billion good jobs.”

--The Coming Jobs War (2011)
Jim Clifton, pg. 2

“When globalization and IT converge,
the best educated workers get raises and the least-educated get pink slips—or don’t get jobs in the first place.”

--That Used to Be Us (2011)

Thomas L. Friedman &

“(Today’s) students don’t want to merely graduate, they want an education that results in a good job.”
