With Style

Style. What is style? And what is Angel style? Angel style can be embodied in a thousand things. It can be Aaron Rios making the sign of the cross after winning a race. It can be Aaron Vossler's surfer entrance during the Mr. IWA contest. Angel style means freshman initiation with reasonable taste, and National Honor Society assembly skits. Angel Style means the Octagon Club volunteering at Operation Paintbrush. Angel style means painted faces and bandanas at pep rallies. Angel style means different things to different people. But it all equates to good manners, simple courtesies and a sense of values.

As the Class of 1994 graduates, they leave with more than a good education and a few memories. They leave as embodiments of Angel style. They carry to their respective colleges and universities that unique sense of fun, excitement, service and respect found in these green halls.

1994 has been a year for growing. Our student body has grown, not necessarily in numbers, but in mind and spirit. One really obvious example is the junior class of 1994. As a member of this class, I have seen my fellow juniors go from apathy to ultimate participation. Last year, we sat pathetically silent at pep rallies. This year we won the spirit award three times. Is it that we have grown in our school pride and spirit as upperclassmen? Or have we just grown as individuals? Regardless, we have grown, and grown in other ways, also. We will continue to move forward, to grow in our spirit and in our pride as Angels. We will continue to be a part of that special Angel style.

Clubs and Activities

Clubs Offer Expanded Insight

Academics, isn't the only area of focus for students at IWA. Many students are involved in clubs and organizations.

Members of organizations like Band and Thespians perform during concerts and plays.

The Octagon Club, IWA's student branch of the larger Optimist Club, joins in local community volunteer efforts. The Nike Career Club explores different career opportunities.

The Junior Statesmen of America (JSA) examine the political processes in the U.S. through debate and statewide conventions.

Honor societies — National Honor Society, Mu Alpha Theta (math), and Tri-M (music) — recognize the special talents of IWA students.

Foreign language clubs foster a deeper understanding of their respective language.

Clubs and organizations give students another dimension to student life at IWA.

Academics, while certainly the key to success, isn't the only area of focus for students at Incarnate Word Academy. Many students are involved in the clubs and organizations that are offered at IWA.

The Junior Statesmen of America (JSA) expand their understanding of the political processes in the United States through debate and attendance at statewide conventions and government-focused summer schools.

Acting . . . With Style

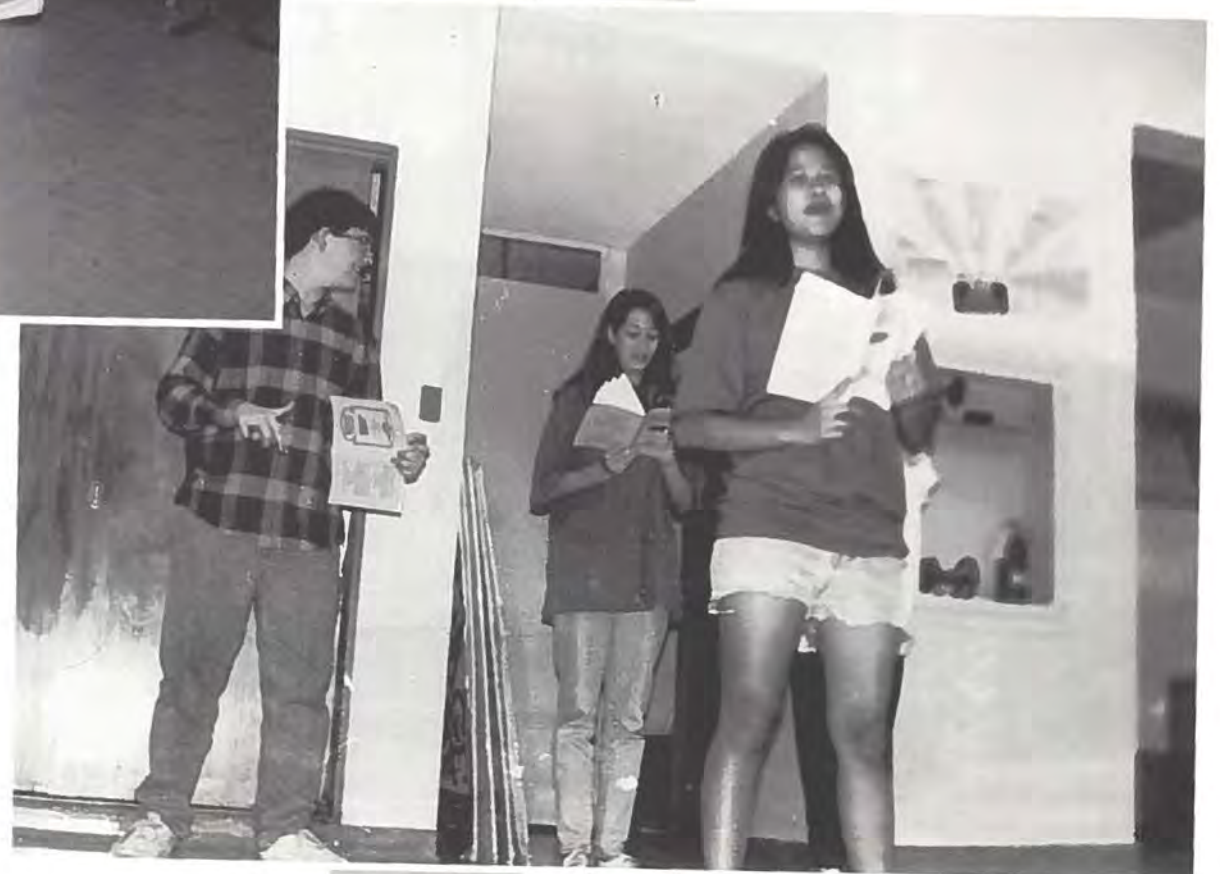

Each school year, the Incarnate Word Academy "Angel Players" present two theatrical productions, one in the fall and one in the spring. Students perform a dazzling and entertaining array of acting, singing, dancing and comedy routines during one production. The second production is usually a more serious and "dramatical" play (if that's not redundant).

The two productions this year were Trixie True: Teen Detective and Night of January 16.

Trixie True: Teen Detective was a comical look at the adventure of Trixie True (Cheryl Pizarro) and her two "chums" (Ashley Lewis and Jean Tabone). Trixie had to fight her way through the ordinary life of an average 18-year-old and save the world at the same time. She pitted her wits against industrial spies Meghan Williams and Bill Garza. However, the entire life of Trixie True took place in the mind of writer Joe Sneed (Alex Narvaez) who wrote Trixie True books to make a living. The rest of the cast included Ben Smith, Hildreth England, Michael Lewis and Monty Mitra.

Drama director Mrs. Andrea Hasse decided to try something different for the spring production. Night of January 16th, an Ayn Rand creation, revolves around a courtroom drama involving the murder of a rich and powerful tycoon. The jury must decide the guilt or innocence of the accused. And who was the jury? The play audience sat in judgment during each presentation of the play. It was up to defense attorneys Alex Narvaez and Money Mitra and district attorneys Jean Tabone and John Wilder to help determine the fate of Karen Andre. Witnesses included Meghan Williams, Mike Tabone, Heather Walker, Kristine Laudadio, Jason Richards, Cheryl Pizarro, Rudy Reyes, Mike Lewis, Michelle Amsler, Ben Smith and Kristen Barker. Court members were Veronica Solis, Ashley Lewis and Collin Bost.

TAPPS: The Winning Style

We should be proud of the IWA team's performance at the statewide TAPPS tournament. IWA was ranked first in academics for AAA (large) schools.

Some individuals placing well in the Texas contest include Stephen Lickteig, Kristen Chamberlin, Cris Birnbaum, Anthony Lickteig, Andy Bonelli, Krista Burk, Kenneth Trevino, Amanda Padron, and Theresa McHugh.

Many IWA winners in the TAPPS competition won in categories other than academics. In photography, Eddie Garza ranked first, while others placed well. In both photography and art, several students ranked high in the district tournament.

It was a good year for IWA in the TAPPS competition. We certainly showed our winning style.

Writing With Angel Style . . .

IWA students expressed a special Angel style with their literary offerings:

A Prayer for All Children

*Children of the future, may you live in a world of peace.
May you never know prejudice, war or hatred.
Children of the future,
Learn to love each other as brother and sister,
That you may help others at times of crisis.
May you also know the importance of life,
And never learn the worst destruction of new life — abortion.
Children of the future,
May you do well in your education,
That you may enlighten your world with new and better things.
May you also use your wisdom to help others, not just yourselves.
Children of the future,
We leave the world's problems in your hands,
That you may have a world of peace and unity.
— Heather Walker*

Jack

*There was an ant named Jack.
He was walking down the street.
He came to a large wall.
He looked up at the large gray wall.
It was curved.
Jack didn't know how to get over it.
Jack didn't know how to find his friends.
He pondered and pondered.
Finally he walked around.
— Sarah Loveless*

Shadows

*I follow her. I want to be her.
She calls me her shadow,
I say "I'm just your sister."
"Teach me," I say.
"Follow me," she answers.
— Laura Canterbury*

I am Woman

*I am a liberal woman.
I am in your face,
Breathe my breath,
Sense my power.
— Priscilla Durbin*

Later

*Later in that day he came back.
He saw the big windows that almost reached the wooden floors.
The sofa sat in the corner.
It was different in the afternoon.
The floor craked.
The branches rustled with the wind.
The ghost lingered from the morning
— Alex Narvaez*

What I Am

*I am like the wind,
Many times changing my mind as the wind changes speed.
I am the person you see right behind you in a race, never giving up.
I am what I am,
And that's what I want to be.
— Juan Eguia*

Life

Life goes around in circles, some say. I say it goes on day by day, hour by hour, minute by minute. How many times I have wished to go back to that day, that hour, that minute, that time. If life went in circles we would keep repeating and doing what we do every day. Every second someone makes a new mistake. Sometimes the same mistake. Maybe life does go in circles.

— Laura Canterbury

The darkness of the sky and beating of my heart. I wait in wonder, looking at the moon above. The sea of death stands before me and I hesitate to hear its whisper. For my fear grows fast among my weary body before the rising tide. I feel no need to live any longer, my love I knew once before has gone before me to this sea of black bitterness. I listen and hear the call from his shattering waves. Calling for me to join my love in blissful harmony.

— Yvette Martinez

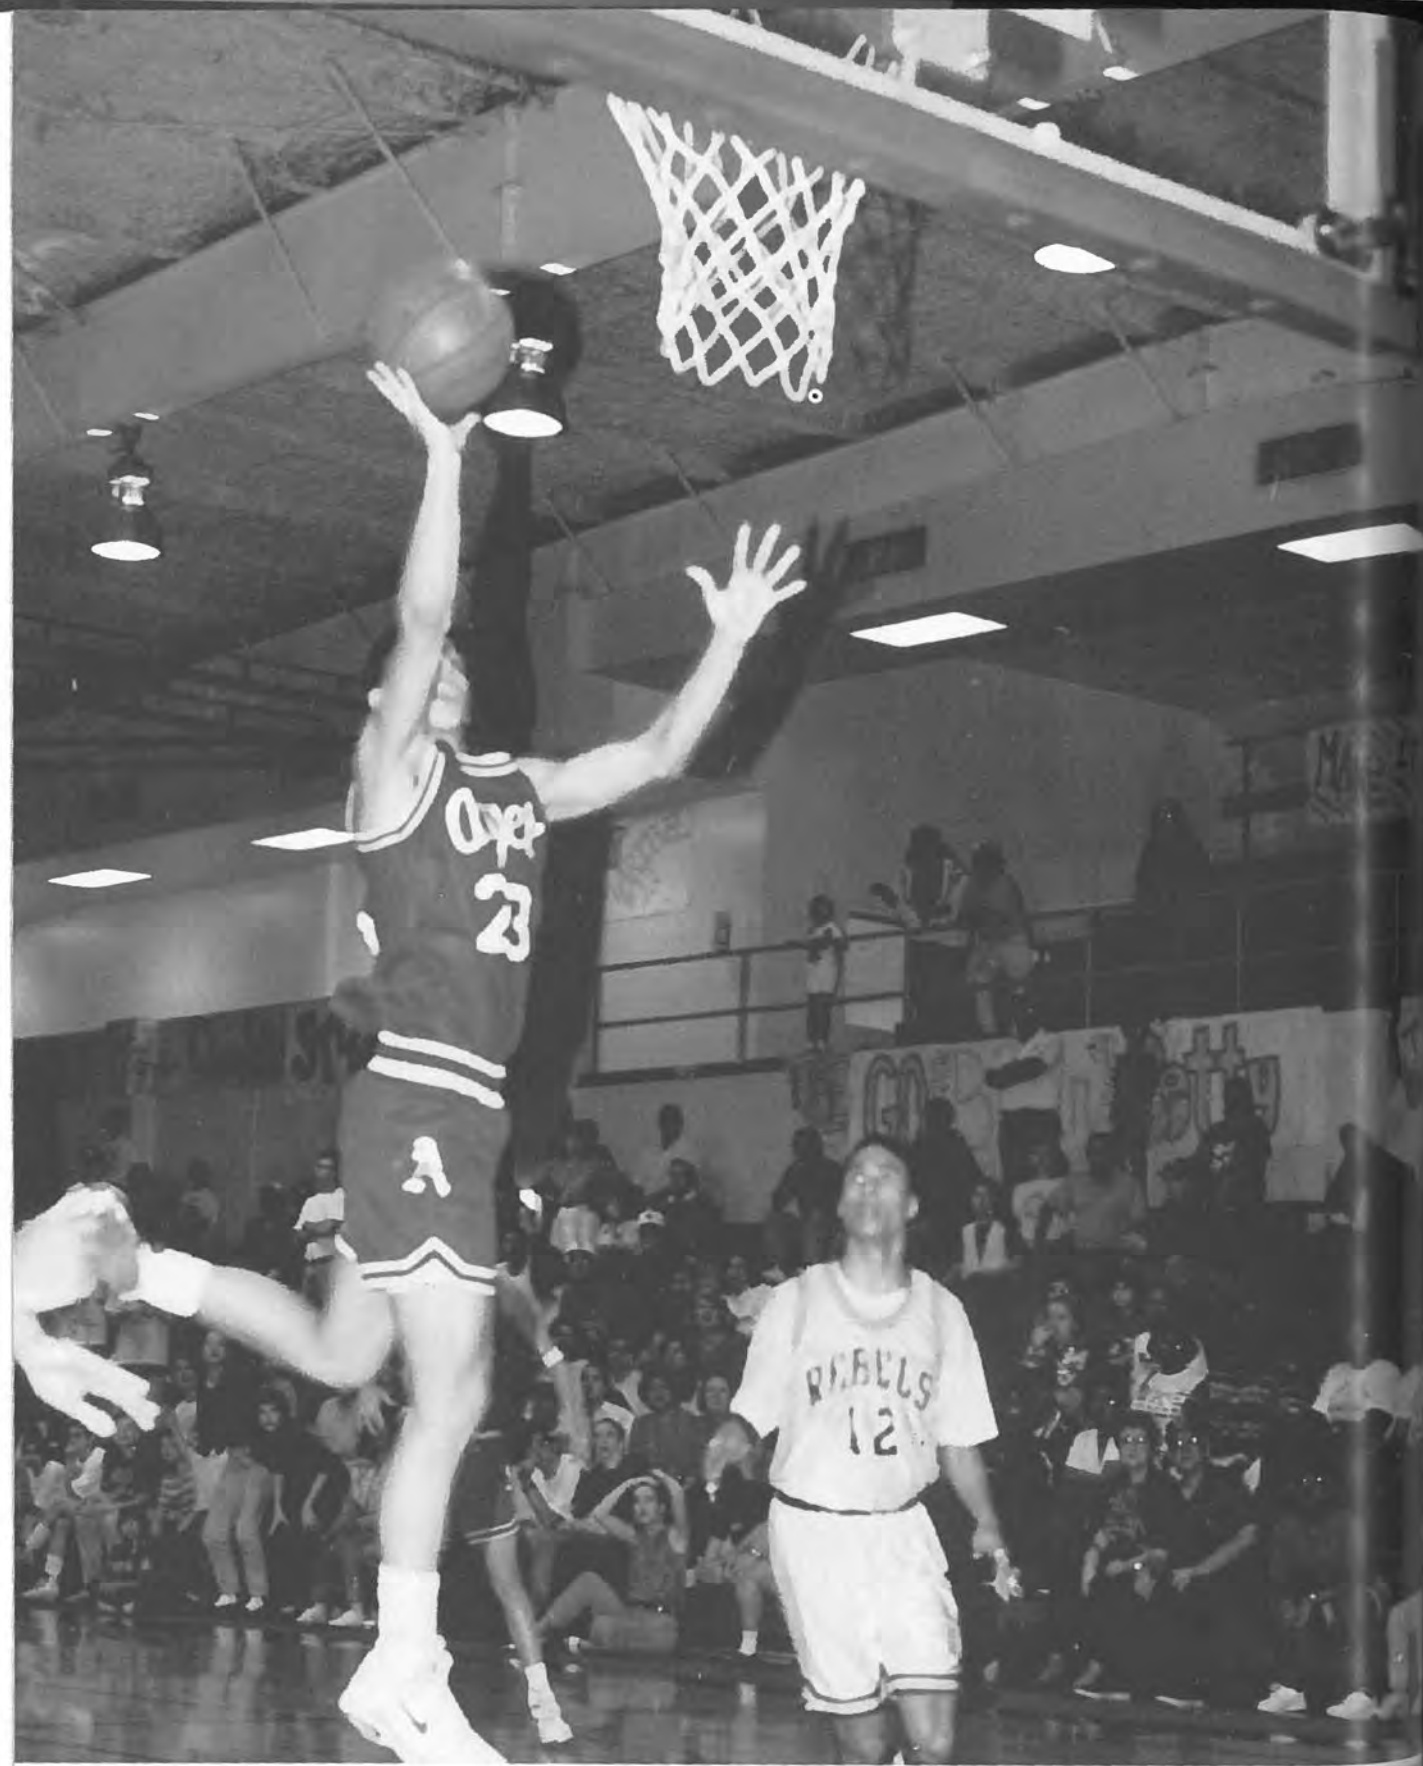

Killer

*Black as death
Cold as ice.
The killer moves about, wielding
his knife.
To strike down anything in the way.
Not to live another day.
Living with fear,
and burning with rage.
He will take any age.
He may do it here,
or there.
He doesn't really care.
— Michael Gauss*

GOODBYES are not forever

...

Principal George Potter

Our principal George Potter will not be returning to IWA next year. He will be sorely missed.

After serving as Assistant Principal for one year, Mr. Potter became the High School Principal. He has performed his duties well in this position over the past two years.

Although IWA will not be the same without Mr. Potter, we can be sure that the influence he commanded will be felt by all whose lives he touched.

Sister Mary Damian

Her spirit lives on

Sister Mary Damian Ordener, a Sister of the Incarnate Word and Blessed Sacrament for 64 years, died on December 11, 1993.

Throughout her long career, she helped shape countless lives. She was named the Alumna of the Year for Outstanding Service in Education in 1992.

After teaching for many years in several schools in the Coastal Bend area, she finally settled down at Incarnate Word High School, where she ran the bookstore and tutored math.

Although her official job was managing the bookstore, she never seemed to run out of time or energy to help others, teachers and students alike. Even as her illness (and pain) progressed, she did not complain nor did she allow it to interfere with her work.

Sister Damian's spirit of cheerfulness and grace will live on in those she inspired.

Henry Atkinson Choir Director

Choir Director Henry Atkinson, a new member of IWA's staff, passed away on June 5, 1993 after an extended illness.

Music was Mr. Atkinson's life. He had progressed from singing in choirs at church and school to singing in the Chorale of Texas.

In addition to singing, Mr. Atkinson also composed, including music for two gospel albums.

His musical talent also earned him places in both Moody and Del Mar's Hall of Fame.

During the past year, Mr. Atkinson' goal of becoming both a teacher and a choir director was realized at IWA. His talents will be missed.
