EDUCATOR DIVERSITY

INTRODUCTION

The racial imbalance between U.S. students and their teachers is stark: nearly 80% of all K–12 teachers identify as white, while more than half of students identify as students of color. The lack of racially diverse teachers presents an urgent problem that federal policy, states, and districts can address right now. This disparity is a direct result of the disconnect between systems that recruit, prepare, and hire educators. The effects of disparate, marginalizing systems stunt efforts to achieve a workforce of educators who represent our students.

Once hired, research demonstrates that Educators of Color (EOC) are retained at lower rates than their white counterparts. They are challenged with navigating an unforgiving workplace, while simultaneously often bearing the pressure of being one of the only Educators of Color in the building. EOCs are frequently asked to assimilate into systems designed for white teachers and students that do not honor the richness of their culture and community.

Students of color and their families have expressed the need for educators who understand and effectively work with them as crucial to their success in school. PSESD’s Youth Wisdom Council and Community Wisdom Council, the NAACP Youth Council and student of color advocacy group The Root of Our Youth all identify the need for more educators of color as a key priority.

School systems that devalue EOCs have a trickle-down impact on our student population, negatively impacting their educational experiences and outcomes. At the same time, there is compelling evidence to show that Educators of Color have profound beneficial impacts on the success of our nation’s most underserved students, and in fact on white students as well. Recent research has demonstrated the positive academic and social-emotional benefits teachers of color have and their potential to bolster the academic success and well-being of all students while addressing the critical opportunity gap students of color have historically faced.

INVESTING IN A DIVERSE EDUCATOR WORKFORCE

Our educator workforce is at a critical point. Attention over the last few years has been dramatic as educators across the board have left the profession. We believe the time is now to focus our efforts across systems to identify, recruit, and retain the educators who represent our students, understand their lives, and who embody the practices they tell us will help them learn and achieve their full potential. Federal funding can remove barriers to becoming an educator, incentivize the creation of pathways that connect our systems, and create systemic collective commitment to diversifying our educator workforce for the benefit of all our students. Specifically, we propose legislation that:

1. Incentivizes collaborations, alignment and partnerships between community-based organizations serving Black, Indigenous and Educators of Color, institutions of higher education, and school districts creating pathways into educational careers for Black, Indigenous and People of Color
2. Invests in community-based solutions in which financial support is available, accessible and controlled by community-based organizations and people they serve. Communities know best what they need and how best to use resources. It is crucial to avoid the unnecessary barriers and gate-keeping that can happen when funding is only allocated to universities and state agencies
3. Provides financial support for Black, Indigenous and People of Color who want to pursue education as a career path
4. Provides financial support for Black, Indigenous and People of Color who need to give up full-time employment to complete student teaching requirements
5. Provides financial incentives for districts and educational service agencies to provide professional learning for all educators on culturally responsive practices, and to implement active efforts to recruit, retain, and advance educators and leaders of color, such as:
   - Grow Your Own programs for paraprofessionals
   - High school teacher academies
   - Culturally responsive mentoring and intentional placement for new Educators of Color
   - Affinity-based support groups for Educators of Color
6. Leadership development or mentoring programs for Black, Indigenous and Educators of Color seeking advancement
7. Implementing anti-racist hiring policies and practices
8. Incentivizes recruitment and retention of Black, Indigenous and People of Color in educator preparation programs to complete institutions of higher education
9. Provides financial incentives for states mandating the intentional recruitment, placement and mentoring of new Educators of Color

A diverse educator workforce has the potential to transform our schools into humanizing places that allow all our students to thrive. When adults of color in a school feel valued, honored, and included, the students who most relate to them will feel the same. With investment in the systems that recruit, prepare, retain, and advance our Black, Indigenous and Educators of Color, we believe policy can play a powerful role in transforming our educator workforce into one that effectively serves our nation’s students.
