Q. What are CFIS’s sources of revenue?

A. The chart below shows CFIS’s revenue streams in 2022-23:

Alberta Education’s funding formula is based on a 3-year weighted average calculation based on enrolment. Therefore, funding can change from year to year, based on the most recent 3 years of enrolment of eligible students. Alberta Education had temporarily held funding in recent years at rates constant at 2020/21 levels to ensure that CFIS had not been negatively impacted on funding due to decline in enrolment due to Covid 19. Alberta Education funding no longer considers the impact of Covid 19 on enrolment and all funding calculations have been re-established.

Q. What are CFIS’s major operating costs (expenditures)?

A. The chart below shows CFIS’s expenditures in 2022-23:

Major areas of expenditure include teacher and staff salaries, wages and benefits (including pension/RSP contributions, and premiums for employee health and dental benefits); debt principal and interest payments; utilities, maintenance and improvements to the building and grounds; educational enhancements to various levels of the school (e.g. UNESCO, Canadian Independent Accredited Schools, Round Square, and International Baccalaureate Programs) and individual student learning (e.g. learning strategists, literacy coaches); and strategic initiatives.

Q. What factors contribute to annual increases in CFIS’s tuition fees?

A. The CFIS Society’s Board of Governors (the “Board”) does not take tuition fee increases lightly, but it also has a fiduciary responsibility to the short-term and long-term viability of the school. In general, a three percent annual increase in tuition fees would only serve to maintain the status quo of provision of learning. There are a number of factors why this is so.

CFIS’s teaching salary grid attempts to align with those of local school jurisdictions (such as the Calgary Board of Education and the Calgary Catholic School District). This is done in order to retain our teachers, who are one of our school’s greatest assets. It should also be noted that the nature of a teaching salary grid is such that a teacher’s salary is mandated (by the grid) to increase approximately $4,000 per year for each year of experience, up to a maximum of eleven years. With anywhere from 60 to 70 teachers at CFIS “on the faculty grid” and 10 to 15 staff on “the ECE staff grid” each year, this in itself equates to anywhere from a one to two percent tuition fee increase.

Other factors that contribute to potential increases include increases to health and other insurance premiums, cost of utilities, building maintenance costs and debt interest, and the implementation of key strategic initiatives that support the vision and mission of the school.

Each year, Administration and the Board review revenue and expenses, and base any future tuition increase on a combination of the above factors. While the Board would ideally want to not increase tuition during difficult economic times or a pandemic, it is not prudent in either the short-term or the long-term to do so.

Q. Is there any way to predict the tuition fees into the future?

A. The Board and Administration are committed to fiscal stewardship, and this must always be a priority in order to ensure the future viability and sustainability of the school.

All revenues and expenditures are reviewed on a regular basis. Given current provincial government funding levels, we anticipate that an annual increase in fees of somewhere between three and six percent will be required going forward, to maintain the status quo with respect to CFIS’s provision of learning and implementation of key strategic initiatives that support the school’s vision and mission.

In general, independent (private) schools have three levers: Tuition fees, class sizes, and salaries/wages. Moving one lever affects another lever. Our school’s independent school administrators and the Board work constantly to determine the optimal balance between these three levers. For example, lower tuition would likely mean an increase in the number of students per class.

Q. I am a current CFIS parent who loves the school, but due to a change in economic circumstances, am currently unable to afford tuition fees. Are there supports in place to help?

A. Field trips costs are included in tuition fees other than those that are considered optional programs or newer initiatives to CFIS such as the CALM camp. (Please note that Travel Studies, band fees and certain athletic fieldtrips are optional programs and are in addition to tuition.)

Q. We have three children at CFIS. Does this entitle our family to a discount?

A. CFIS offers a 10% tuition fee discount for a family’s third child, and a 15% discount for a fourth child starting in Kindergarten.
