LEADERSHIP

The Army Reserve Officers' Training Corps (ROTC) helps develop leadership skills essential to effectively lead organizations. The ROTC credits earned in classes go toward your diploma. When you graduate, you'll receive a diploma and commission as a Second Lieutenant in the U.S. Army. ROTC training goes beyond the typical college classroom. You could be leading your classmates on a tactical "missions", or taking part in outdoor adventure training designed to improve your ability to solve problems under stress.

Make the decision to lead and serve your country, all without sacrificing your college experience. In Army Reserve Officers' Training Corps (ROTC), a career is waiting for you when you graduate.
