Community Matters

A Community School Giving Campaign

Optum Idaho, in partnership with the Idaho State Department of Education and D&B Supply, is launching a community school giving campaign called "Community Matters." The campaign will provide resources for students and families at 10 community schools throughout Idaho.

Community schools are neighborhood public schools that partner with stakeholders to provide resources, opportunities and supports for academic success and to create strong ties among families, students, schools and communities. Because each community school has unique needs, Optum and its partners will tailor resources for each school.

"Community schools play such an important role in strengthening the overall health of our local communities. Unfortunately, many students in these schools struggle with the necessities, which impacts learning and places strain on faculty and staff. Optum Idaho is happy to partner with 10 schools throughout Idaho to make sure students have access to warm boots for winter, classroom supplies, meals and anything else students may need to better focus on learning."
