Holiday Bazaar Events Set Festive Mood

By Jose Cervantes
and Giselle Harmon

Annually, near the winter season in December, John Glenn High School hosts winter-festive events to celebrate and acknowledge the holiday season. These events are hosted relatively one week before class finals for semester one of the school year. Not only do they celebrate the winter season, but they also bring students together to be involved in school activities. Thursday the thirteenth was an important day in December, as it was the day chosen to host many events such as Holiday Bazaar, the ugly sweater contest, the door decorating contest, and Stuff-a-Bus.

Holiday bazaar is a school event in which clubs sell food to the students and staff in order to fundraise for their club. Revenue raised from their sales helps pay for any club expenses, such as planning to go on a field trip or to buy club-based merchandise. Since many students buy multiple food items from different clubs, students are released early from their fourth period classes to have enough time to collect their food, since there might be long lines for a single club table. The extra time is also used for students to have enough time to eat lunch from the cafeteria, if they choose to.

A total of ten clubs sold food this year with three clubs selling desserts, two clubs selling drinks, and five clubs selling food and meals. Cheer brought us delicious posole, ASB sold out of their boba drinks, and the two most popular food items were Bear Burrito Combos by the Key Club, and Chick-Fil-A Combos by the CSF club. In fact, they were also both the most expensive combos sold, as Bear Burrito combos cost $10, and the Chick-Fil-A combo went for $9. Congratulations to all of our clubs for raising so much money!

The ugly sweater contest displays the festive winter season with a retro aspect. This year, Rudy Torres, who is in 12th grade, won the ugly sweater contest.

His sweater featured a adorable reindeer with physical bells that he seemed to enjoy when he rang them. Some students wore a pop-culture styled sweater with winter characteristics, such as a winter-themed Star Wars sweater. The tradition of wearing ugly sweaters has turned into a pop culture custom across America. Originally, children disliked wearing ugly Christmas sweaters, which became a tradition in itself. Now, the sweaters are specifically designed to be ugly, exaggerating silly features, but with a fashionable approach. The sweaters now aim to be so remarkably cute in their own way that the uglier they are, the better they are, in a contemporary sense.

The door decorating contest features decorations made by students and teachers of each fourth period class. Fourth period classes can participate in the contest, but it is not mandatory. This year's winner will be announced on Tuesday, December 18. The themes made by students and teachers usually revolve around the subject of the class's choosing with winter elements embedded on the door. Some classroom doors in the Language Arts buildings have been decorated with the face of a reindeer, for example. This was to lighten up the holiday mood and to decorate areas with the festive cheer that helps people get into the spirit of the holidays.

Toys for Tots at SEA

By Silvia Herrera Teas

As the time for cheer arrives, who doesn't get excited? The cadets at Southeast Academy, though, are even more excited than usual. Every platoon is riled up and ready to win the contest of the month, while also doing something extraordinarily kind.

Well, what is this oh-so-exciting event, you may ask? The answer is the Toys for Tots event. Sure, Toys for Tots doesn't only occur at Southeast Academy, but their way of doing it is unique. Cadets are actually competing to fill up a box with toys to give to children! These cadets have been going to stores, and possibly even pulling out their hair, trying to decide what the best gift is for those amazing children.

For each and every one of the platoons at Southeast Academy, failure is not an option, not only in this lighthearted competition, but also in their academic pursuits. It's just one more way to ensure that during this time of holiday giving, everyone wins.

Stuff-a-Bus, Angel Donations Big Success

By Natalie Villarreal

CSF and AVID students proudly support Stuff-a-Bus

In addition to celebrating our Holiday Bazaar on December 13, the students of John Glenn also held their annual Stuff-a-Bus and Gold Angel and Dollar Angel events, which donate toys, money, and clothing to children in need. This year was the first year that the Bazaar and the charity events fell on the same day, and the proceedings went very well.

For the Stuff-a-Bus event, we were looking to beat last year's amount of toys donated. The new goal this year was set to try and donate more than 300 toys. We are proud to report that this year we made it to 308 toys donated for Stuff-a-Bus. The goal surpassed last year's number of donated toys of 300!

The Gold Angels and Dollar Angels give the gifts of clothing and money. Last year, thirty Gold Angels went toward clothes for the needy, and 100 Dollar Angels helped buy more toys. Once again, this year, we surpassed both of those totals, as forty Gold Angels were donated and 150 Dollar Angels were donated, which went toward the purchase of more toys for children in need.

Mrs. Cynthia Johnson, the coordinator for this event, got inspired to do the toy drive because, as the advisor of CSF and AVID, she is responsible for fundraising and donating money through Norwalk Social Services. CSF is known as scholars for service, and the students raise money for different organizations over the years. Mrs. Johnson and Glenn CSF have sponsored the Stuff-a-Bus for about 10 years.

Besides CSF, every students and staff member here at JGHS can be involved in the events through a very simple process by which they bring toys, money, and clothes to school. For Stuff-a-Bus, they just fill up a school bus with toys during lunch. When money is donated, staff and students can buy the Gold Angels, which helps donate clothing, or Dollar Angels, which raises money to buy even more toys for the children. Students can also just bring toys from home and then give them to someone else in need.

By donating toys and money to these foundations, we are giving a needy child an idea of how it would be to have a normal Christmas. A big holiday thank you goes out to the great work done by Mrs. Johnson, and all the students, staff, administration, and John Glenn community who contributed to the event and made the lives of children a little bit better with something as simple as clothing or a toy.

Ask the Experts: SEA Teachers

By Andres Hernandez and Sophia Villareal

There are a variety of ways to obtain advice, from family to close friends. Although sometimes we don’t get to see these people every day, we do get to see our teachers every day - so why not ask them?

Southeast Language Arts teachers Mr. Gillett and Mrs. Rodriguez were recently asked to offer advice to struggling students. Mr. Gillett, who was asked what advice he would give to his students who struggle with reading, suggests that students should, “Read as much as you can. The more you read the stronger your vocabulary becomes, and the easier both reading and writing will become.”

Mrs. Rodriguez adds that “Practice makes perfect; and if you continue to keep reading and writing, your Language Arts skills will advance.”

Mr. Gillett was then asked if he has a goal for his students to achieve in his class. After a moment of reflection, he stated that his goal is for students, “To actually enjoy reading and to understand the basic structure of writing.”

Mrs. Rodriguez explained that her goal for students is, “To not settle for being mediocre and for them to push themselves to be excellent.”

Advice coming from the people we are with every day can improve each and every one of us for the better. Teachers often have a way of recognizing our strengths and weaknesses better than we can. Either critical or complimentary, the advice given by our teachers is meant to do good and help us progress in our academic careers; so, don’t hesitate to reach out to our teachers for advice.

Meet Mr. Mesisca

I would like to tell you about our new drama teacher, Mr. Jonathan Mesisca. He is from Arcadia, California, and has also lived in New York City for 10 years. He was a working actor in New York City, had national tours of Broadway shows, and moved back to California in June 2018. He started acting school at USC, and it has been 16 years since he started teaching theater at elementary schools.

He knew he wanted to be a teacher in college because he took education classes, and to him it seemed fun and interesting. He thought that was something he could do for a career. He didn’t want to leave college, so he stayed another year and got his master’s degree. By that time, he wanted to get out and explore the world. After teaching in Santa Ana, California for a year, he moved to South Bronx in New York. He lived there for four years, then started his own acting business in New York before moving back to California.

He’s been an actor since he was eight years old, but his first acting job was actually in kindergarten when Mr. Mesisca remembers being in a play called Santa Goes to the South Pole. He was Penguin #5: a singing penguin. The penguins wore bow ties and white felt beneath their black shirts. Ever since then, his favorite plays are musicals.

His favorite non-musical play is The Diary of Anne Frank because he had performed it recently in Connecticut. The performance, although a year ago, is still fresh in his mind. His favorite actor is Jim Carrey, especially in the movies Ace Ventura, Dumb and Dumber, and Liar, Liar. Jim Carrey inspired him because he always wanted to be a comedic actor. Mesisca still does comedies here and there. He was also very inspired musically by Brian Stokes Mitchell, a Broadway singer and actor. He actually had a chance to work with him and meet him.

After the success of Anne Frank Mr. Mesisca is proud to reveal that in the next show, John Glenn is about to see their first musical on the stage--You’re a Good Man, Charlie Brown. Before that, Made-Up Stuff is coming in January, and his advice for people that want to be in drama is to simply get involved. There are fun people, and they have a good time, with food, snacks, and laughter.

In his free time, Mr. Mesisca likes to sleep. He also likes hockey games, hanging out with his wife, and going to see shows and movies. Overall, the new drama teacher is praised by many because of his great personality. Please give him a warm Eagle welcome next time you see him around campus.

Eagle Profile: School Psychologist, Ms. Melissa Martinez

By Juliana Manzanares

If you ever feel down, and need someone to talk to, did you know our psychologist Miss Martinez is open to see everyone? She is in room 201. She has been here at JGHS for 3 years, and has been a school psychologist for 4 years. It took Miss Martinez 7 years of schooling to become a school psychologist. She first started her career at the Los Angeles Unified School District. She learned many important things about school culture, how rich culture is, and how poverty can impact learning.

As a school psychologist, Martinez tests students to determine how they learn, what their strengths are, and finds opportunities for growth. Miss Martinez also provides crisis prevention and intervention. If a student is struggling socially or emotionally, she takes the time to learn about her students and help determine the right solution. To ever have a good result and outcome, this whole process is a team effort, between herself and her student.

Miss Martinez always says, “Whenever there’s a problem, there’s a solution.” She believes she can help many students that are struggling through difficulties. If they want help, she is always willing to see them. Before becoming deep into listening to your problem, she likes to build trust with her students in order for them to accept any type of guidance.

Still, Miss Martinez is human, and at times when hearing certain stories she does get stuck. But no matter the situation, she will try her very best to get to the root of the problem. She’s there to listen if you need to vent, if you have some bad past experiences, or if you have some horrible thoughts. Just get it off your chest and speak to our trusted psychologist. She has learned that sometimes she doesn’t need to have all the answers; she is there to listen if all you need to do is get some weight off your shoulders.

Festive Food Favorites and Holiday Cheer

By Kenneth Roman

Eating food is one of the highlights of the holidays. SEA cadets can attest to that. Cadets nourish their bodies with the food that’s prepared for their families and friends in their comforting home or somewhere else during the frigid months of December and January. They have their different preferences on these foods, however.

In December and January, there are numerous types of gatherings, like a school holiday party, a “Friendsmas” with mass participation, and especially, a family banquet. Whether it’s to celebrate Christmas, Hanukkah, or Kwanzaa, cadets congregate with their loved ones during this festive time of year.

When asked what her favorite dish during these gatherings was, Melissa Rizo, a sophomore who is ranked a Cadet 2nd Class, said, “I enjoy the warmth of the pozole.” Raymy Valladolid, a junior who is ranked a Corporal, responded to the question with the straightforward answer of, “Tamales.”

As a diverse group of people, Southeast cadets have numerous preferences for their foods, but they have one thing in common: their superfluous amount of holiday cheer!

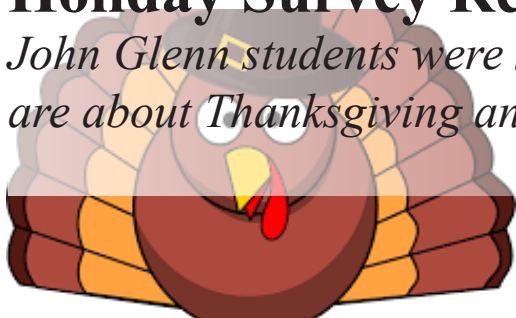

Tamales and pozole are among the best-loved holiday foods for students at SEA and JGHS. (credit: The Cutting Edge Classroom)

- *Makeup kit from the Dollar Store (at 13 years old)

All I Want for Christmas

Bulldog students share their Christmas lists

By John Rosas

Christmas is a time of giving, but unfortunately Santa isn’t always able to get to everybody on his list. Cadets at Southeast Academy want to help ensure that everyone gets his or her wish, and help Santa with all the hard work he is doing. So, what are cadets at SEA wishing for this year?

Cadet Andrew Zuniga wants new Nike Air Max size 12 shoes. When asked what the reason is for wanting new shoes he answered, “I want new shoes because mine are really dirty.”

CSC Keith Aguilar wants to have a total of 1,000 dollars. When asked why he wants such a large amount of cash, he smirked and quipped, “Because money is everything.”

CSC Marcos Hernandez wants a Samsung Galaxy S9 from Santa because, “The screen on my phone is cracked really bad.”

CFC Amy Contreras wants new white Nike shoes because, “They look cute.”

CSC Julian Fernandez chose to be less materialistic than the others. He claims that all he wants is happiness because, “It’s the best feeling in the world.”

A wish list can contain everything from materialistic items to feelings, but everyone must remember it’s not the amount of gifts that matter, it’s the amount of memories you make with family and friends during this joyous holiday season!

Our Wishes

New Year’s Resolutions at Southeast

By Andrew Zuniga

The cadets of Southeast Academy will soon be going away for winter break starting December 21st. This break will continue through New Year’s and will end January 8th. A new year is coming, and we all know that every time a new year starts, we like to find something about ourselves that we’d like to change to better ourselves. So, after all the gifts we’ve received and the time we’ve spent with our families, we get to think about that one thing we want to change about ourselves.

People love to make New Year’s resolutions because it makes them feel like a new, better person. They make all different kinds of resolutions, like eating less (or maybe eating more!). Everyone has something about themselves that they think they have to work on, which shows a lot about how we are as humans. We constantly want to better ourselves and New Year’s is the time for it.

Of course, many cadets are excited about the time out of school for a while and their New Year’s resolutions. For example, Cadet Second Class Cristian Portillo says, “I want to make the most beautiful girl in the world happy...you know who you are.” As you can see, this type of resolution can also help relationships be rekindled.

Sergeant Mariah Rodriguez has a personal goal in mind, when she says, ”I want to get the guts to quit my job.”

Whatever your resolution is for the New Year, stick with it and make it count!

Cherish the Time

By Silvia Herrera Teas

As you impatiently await the Winter 2018 break, have you thought of what you’re most excited about during this holiday season? Winter break begins Friday, December 21, and students at Southeast Academy are already thinking of the most enjoyable things that the holidays bring. For some people, it may be the food they’re most excited about. Perhaps the presents are enough reason for some people to get excited. It could also be religious reasons, but overall, what do you cherish the most?

Cadet Naomi Barrios explains that, “Being able to enjoy it with my family and cherishing the moment” is the most important factor of the holidays for her.

Others also appreciate the food that comes with this very special occasion. For example, CFC Angelica Nieto, a sophomore, states that, “The most important thing about the holidays is being able to spend time with family and friends, while eating delicious Mexican food.”

CFC Cynthia Almanzar, a sophomore, was also asked what the most important thing about the holidays is to her, and she answered that, “Having a family to go to and celebrate the moment of giving” was just as important - if not more important - than everything else during the holidays.

The holidays are a valuable time that should be treasured and kept close to the heart for years to come. As you move on through life, those values may change and evolve into something else, but for now, cherish them and always enjoy the time you are given.

Platoon of the Month: B2 Wins December Honors

By Julian Fernandez, Jr.

Southeast Academy Platoon of the Month, B2 (above)

During the month of December, Battalion has been keeping an eye on the platoons. They are searching for the platoon who has been putting in hard work and staying motivated. After observing the six platoons, Battalion has finally made a decision. Congratulations to B2 for earning the title Platoon of the Month for December!

When Sergeant Jonathan Cuba was asked how they felt for earning Platoon of the Month, he said, "It feels amazing to be recognized for our platoon's hard work and to be noticed. We earned this accomplishment through teamwork and motivation, but there's always room for improvement!"

And just as a reminder for the other platoons: there is always next month to earn this title! So, don't stop being motivated and work hard. Also, congratulate B2 for earning Platoon of the Month.

Holiday Family Traditions Southeast Students Reflect

By Marco Hernandez

Throughout the years, many families do one thing one year and then again the next year, until it becomes a family tradition. Around the holidays, families all around the world have their very own family traditions, whether it be going to a specific place and picking out or cutting down a Christmas tree, opening up gifts at 12:00 a.m. on Christmas morning, or just staying in all day and watching the movie Elf or playing Monopoly. Whatever the tradition is, it is always fun!

Here at Southeast Academy, many of the students are very eager to participate in their family traditions. Cadet Manuel Perez's family tradition is to open up one gift on Christmas Eve. Cadet Perez notes this about his family tradition, "It's always fun seeing what we all got; plus it gets me more excited for the other presents we're going to open."

While Cadet Hannah Cantu's family tradition is to make tamales for Christmas Day, she said, "Spending time with my family and just having fun is the best part."

Cadet Juan Costa's family tradition is making tamales, pozole, and ponche as a family for Christmas dinner. Cadet Costa says, "It's nice just to kick it with the fam' and eat all the bomb food."

Many holidays are coming up, and if you have any family traditions, enjoy them and enjoy the holidays with the ones you love!

The Diary of Anne Frank: Audiences Adore Moving Performance by Talented Eagle Drama Department

By Natalie Villarreal

*Actors remained on stage even during intermission (above);

as she walked into the room.

Mr. Mesisca's overall vision for the play was very creative. The thrust worked very well for the play because you got to see the action from all sides. In addition to Saucedo's convincing performance, all of the actors who performed were very good at portraying their characters. Lead actress Gabriella Estrada was poignant and charming as Anne Frank, and the stoic calm of Anne's parents Otto Frank (James Gonzales) and Edith Frank (Angelica Moreno) provided realism. Gonzales' final monologue was particularly tear-jerking, as he called out the tragic fates of all the characters we had grown to love like family throughout the performance. The first play of the year was really a hit, including a sold-out final night. Eagle students, staff, and their families are looking forward to seeing many more! Join the Drama Department for Made-Up Stuff in January,

The John Glenn High School Drama Department performed The Diary of Anne Frank on Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday nights at 7:00pm, December 5-7. As director and drama instructor Jonathan Mesisca noted in the program, the newly-adapted Wendy Kesselman play, by Frances Goodrich and Albert Hackett, "Brings to light one of the ugliest aspects of society--discrimination." The tragedy of the holocaust was brought to life through the words of Anne Frank's diary, as families hid from Nazi Germany for two years in a secret annex--living through fear with family love, laughter, growth, and hope.

The actors did a really good job of portraying their characters. You could tell by the way they acted they were really in sync with their characters. Everyone did a good job with pronunciation and tone when speaking. In my opinion, Mr. Van Daan, played by Damian Saucedo, was the most believable character in the play. When he gets frustrated or angry you can really feel the anger in the room. In the argument scene between Mr. and Mrs. Van Daan (Rebecca Ayala), you get the sense that they've been married for many years and arguing for just as long.

The scenic design for the play was built very uniquely. The set was really, purposefully crammed, which gave the audience a feel for how the families actually lived up in the annex. The actors being so up close and personal with the audience really helps the audience understand the play more. It lets the audience be a part of the action while also watching it happen.

The sound design for the play was also very well put together. Sound technicians Justin Ayon, Andrew Gonzalez, Christian Rosas, and Simon Strukelj did an amazing job! They used cues to make sounds of things like the clock, a buzzer, robberies and more. One of the most memorable sound cues in the play was the sounds of the Gestapo sirens blaring behind you. The siren started from the left side of the room and proceeded to sound like it was passing right behind you and fading out into the distance to the right.

The lighting design for the play was also very well done. Lighting was used very well when certain characters were doing a monologue. The lighting served a really good purpose also when the police sirens went by, as the lights in the back flickered red and blue to signify that the police were passing by. Lighting was also done very well when focusing on one character or putting a spotlight on one specific character. All lighting cues were on point and perfectly timed, thanks to technicians Cecy Alejo, Jeremy Alonso, and stage managers Maria Aguayo and Joseph Nunez. If there were any mistakes they were definitely not noticable.

The costumes that each character wore really gave the audience an idea of how people of that time period dressed. Thanks to wardrobe supervisor Rebecca Melendez, costumes did play a bit of a role in identifying characters. Each character had around five costume changes, right in front of the audience, switching between day outfits and sleepwear. The person with the most memorable outfit in the play had to be Mrs. Van Daan (Ayala) and that precious fur coat of hers. You could tell right away that it was Mrs. Van Daan as soon

Migrant Border Crisis Causes Outrage & Friction

By Jason Saucedo

There has been a huge migrant crisis at the U.S. and Mexico border, and I'll explain what's going on. Firstly, let's begin with the basics: we know that this crisis is happening at the United States' southern border. Also, we know it's a caravan of Central American migrants that is trying to get past the border. The caravan group is mostly made up of people from Honduras, but people from El Salvador and Guatemala are also involved. A caravan is, traditionally, a group of people, especially traders or pilgrims, traveling together across a desert or other land.

To sum up the main reasons why all of these people are leaving their homes, I will use facts about their countries:

Reason 1: These Central American countries are ranked among the most non-war zone violent places in the world, including one of the worst for domestic violence.

Reason 2: The political class is not only allowing but are also involved with the drug trafficking.

Reason 3: One of the biggest reasons why all these people are leaving and forming caravans are because of a lack of economic opportunity. In these countries, it's rare to get a job; and if you do, it doesn't pay well and they aren't safe. That's mainly why they are trying to come to the U.S.-The jobs over here are easy to get, they pay well, and they are safe.

But what President Donald Trump and his administration did to prevent a small portion of the group to enter the U.S. is order the border agents to throw out lots of tear gas. Tear gas is gas that causes severe irritation to the eyes and is used to make large groups/riots to disperse. Trump has also said numerous times that the migrants are "invading" the United States. Furthermore, border control agents are closing asylum applications so the migrants can't apply for asylum to stay in the U.S.

Now that I have explained everything that is going on, I will give my very own opinion about the situation. If I was in President Trump's shoes, I would let the migrants come through. All they want is a better life, and it's not their fault that their countries are currently as bad as they are.

So, in conclusion, I would have compassion and let the migrants come into America if I were President.

Vaping Can Destroy Your Life

-Anonymous Editorial-

Schools across the United States are facing a public health crisis. According to the FDA and districts around the nation, vaping has become an outbreak in schools across the country. High school students are not the only ones pertaining to the crisis--junior high and middle school students have been found vaping on campus. Not only is this bad for your health, it is also bad for your school academic record, which is heavily impacted by the crisis. Here is how the vaping crisis affects you and affects students across the nation.

Many people, teens included, start trying vaping as another alternate from their smoking habit. While studies show that vaping is technically less harmful than smoking tobacco (ordinary cigarettes), the long term effects of vaping remain harmful. In addition to being addictive, nicotine can damage your brain development, and vapes can deliver a large amount of the harmful nicotine. 51% of high school seniors believed that what they were smoking was just harmless flavoring by vaping.

This kind of attitude is naive and unacceptable. As our security guard, Wesley Phillips, notes, "The harmful effects of drugs has been taught in school your whole life," and it should be common sense by now. Vaping is just as addictive as smoking cigarettes. "Every person should know the effect of different drugs, no matter what the substance may be," Wes adds. "All addictions are dangerous; teens should resolve to do different activities instead of being hooked on anything harmful."

In general, whether it's smoking or vaping, not only is it bad for your health, but the consequences that can affect your life in the long run are drastic. If students were to get caught with vaping substances on campus, it will be determined that they are to be either suspended or even expelled from the school and maybe even from the district. Even if a student returns to school from a suspension, he or she will be ineligible for extracurricular activities like sports, senior activities, grad night, dances, field trips, cheer, and band.

Not only that, but how would the people who care about you and your loved ones feel if they found out you were disciplined for such a reason? The guilt, shame, and embarrassment that comes with vaping trouble can be just as severe as academic consequences. As Wes mentions, "It is depressing when teens start doing drugs. The average teen is weak when it comes to peer pressure and judgement. It's especially a weak mentality for athletes to begin a smoking habit by peer pressure. They are throwing their lives away," he warns.

A numerous amount of students have been caught either smoking or vaping on their school campus; and, students tend to get caught smoking substances most frequently in school restrooms. For a teenage student who develops a habit of vaping and tends to feel that it is okay to bring it to school, think of it this way: Students who abuse such substances both during and after school hours are bound to get caught either way, regardless if they do it on campus between 8:00am and 3:00pm. Even after-school activity off campus can lead to trouble for students.

Not only are there these numerous consequences, but vaping also eventually leads to poor academic skills that will begin to lead to students feeling less of an urge to get work done in the classroom and begin to fall off, or slip, into poor attendance, grades, and attitudes at school. So, in conclusion, remember what you've learned in school your whole life: If you see something, say something.

Urban Legends Frighten and Entertain

(The Truth Is Out There!)

By Val Gamez

There is a lot unknown about our own world and the world that is just above our heads. Even some animals that were thought to be extinct managed to show how wrong we were, as their rediscovery left scientists confused and interested in what else we might have missed on Earth.

Mysteries like these have always caused some kind of legend that could be seen as true. Stories of mysterious events or terrifying creatures from different states and countries also tend to cause some sort of trouble.

For example, the Slenderman legend tells of two girls who had attempted to kill their friend, as one of the girls explained to the nymag.com, "To become proxies, or puppets of Slenderman through murder."

There have even been disappearances in certain places on Earth, like in the Bermuda Triangle. Evidence seems to support the chance that there is something mysterious about the place, as numerous planes and boats have gone missing whenever they traveled through that exact area of the North Atlantic Ocean.

However, a local legend tells the most fascinating tale. Griffith Park in Los Angeles had a curse placed upon it more than one hundred years ago. The curse was laid upon the land after the niece of the deceased landowner was not given anything from the sudden drafting of a written will.

In the will, only some of the furniture was given to the late landowner's sister, while the land was given to the man who helped create the bogus will.

Petranilla, the landowner's niece, was furious and placed a curse which would make their cattle die, and any vegetation besides grass would wither and also die.

After a while, for his own reasons, the selfish man gave the land to his lawyer. He was later shot, all while he was happy about the money that he was gaining from the land. When the land was sold to someone else, no matter how hard he tried, any attempt to make a profitable farm from the place quickly died.

More strange occurrences and misfortunes fell upon those who owned the land, as their property was either destroyed by the weather or the animals were dying off. Finally, in the late 19th century, the property was given to the city of Los Angeles to use as a park, when finally, the events from the past didn't seem to be recurring any more.

Music Reviews: Alice in Chains - Rainier Fog

By Brandon Rodriguez

Alice in Chains is a American rock band from Seattle, Washington formed in 1987 by guitarist Jerry Cantrell, drummer Sean Kinny, bassist Mike Inez, and lead vocalist Layne Staley (deceased; replaced by William Duvall). Rainier Fog is the sixth album Alice in Chains has released. This album has some bluesy-psychedelia and crunchy hard rock.

*“The One You Know” - The first song off of Rainier Fog. “The One You Know,” has a nice opening riff. Once the guitars are joined by the bass, drums, and vocals, the song starts to get catchy, along with Jerry Cantrell’s echoey voice with Duvall’s backup vocals.

*“Rainier Fog” - The second song has a nice beat to it, starting off with a nice sounding guitar; this song gets right to the point and doesn’t calm down until it’s over.

*“Red Giant” - This song is one of the harder songs, and it has a sort of metal sound to it, adding to it the nice creepy sounding vocals of William Duvall.

*“Fly” - This song is one of the more calmer songs when it starts off and rapidly becomes more of a hard rock song. This song is a nice change from the usual hard rock feel of Alice in Chains. The lyrics, along with the guitar, create a nice sound that is very enjoyable.

*“Drone” - This one is a nice slow one, but it’s not a soft one. This song focuses on the vocals of Cantrell and Duvall by having moments where all the instruments stop and it’s just their acapella voices.

*“Deaf Ears, Blind Eyes” - This song is boring; having the same riff repeat over and over again is bland and boring. The solo provides nothing to the song; it’s a huge miss for me.

*“Maybe” - This song starts off with the vocals of Duvall and Cantrell. As the drums start to fade in, this song changes between a calm sound to a hard rock sound.

*“So Far Under” - This song has a nice sound. This one is definitely a great song with a different type of sound from the other songs on the album. Unlike most other Alice in Chains song lyrics, this one rhymes a lot.

*“Never Fade” - This song begins with some hard drum banging and a catchy guitar riff. This song is definitely the best one on the album.

*“All I Am” - This one is another soft one and it is the longest song on the album, the chilling lyrics with all the instruments create a nice sound. It was a nice way to end the album where every song is hard and bland.

Overall, Rainier Fog was very repetitive. It had some good moments, such as “Never Fade” and “The One You Know.” The guitars by Jerry Cantrell were excellent. But, the repetitive nature of the album made it a little boring. If they could return to their roots and make an album that sounds like the old Alice in Chains, it would be most welcome. I would give the album a score of 6 out of 10.

Tyler, The Creator - Inspired by Illumination and Dr. Seuss’ The Grinch

By Justine Gallardo

Tyler, The Creator released a Hip-Hop EP entitled Inspired by Illumination & Dr. Seuss’ The Grinch on November 18. Artists featured on the EP include Ryan Beatty, Santigold, and Jerry Paper. The EP is just ten minutes long with a total of six songs, each no longer than two minutes and thirty seconds.

Tyler is also featured in The Grinch and on the official soundtrack for it with a remake of the Christmas classic “You’re a Mean One, Mr. Grinch” and “I am the Grinch” (feat. Fletcher Jones).

Tyler stated that his intentions for the EP were to “Make christmas themed music, but not making it too Christmas-y was the goal.” He wanted children to be an audience but also the parents, without causing annoyance from perhaps repeating a song.

The EP features two songs as its intro and outro as strictly instrumental. Those would be called “Whoville” and “Cindy Lou’s Wish,” which spread Christmas vibes while being their own original instrumentals.

The collaboration “Lights On” features artists Santigold and Ryan Beatty. This song is about going home no matter how long it might take or whatever it takes to get there. With the repetition of the lyric “Lights on,” they show that they don’t lose hope in their coming home and so finding their way back home.

Another collaboration entitled “Hot Chocolate” features Jerry Paper. The song talks about how its cold and how much he loves hot chocolate in the winter time. He talks about how he likes his hot chocolate and what he likes in it also. Jerry talks about sitting by the fire and doing puzzles on Christmas.

On the track “Big Bag,” Tyler uses his rap skills to do the track alone. It starts with a few details of his childhood during Christmas time. It is also said to be written from the perspective of the Grinch stealing. As he’s in the Grinch’s perspective, we are taken through people’s homes as he steals all the gifts after jumping from the rooftops and putting everything into his big bag, creeping around all the homes making sure to make no noise.

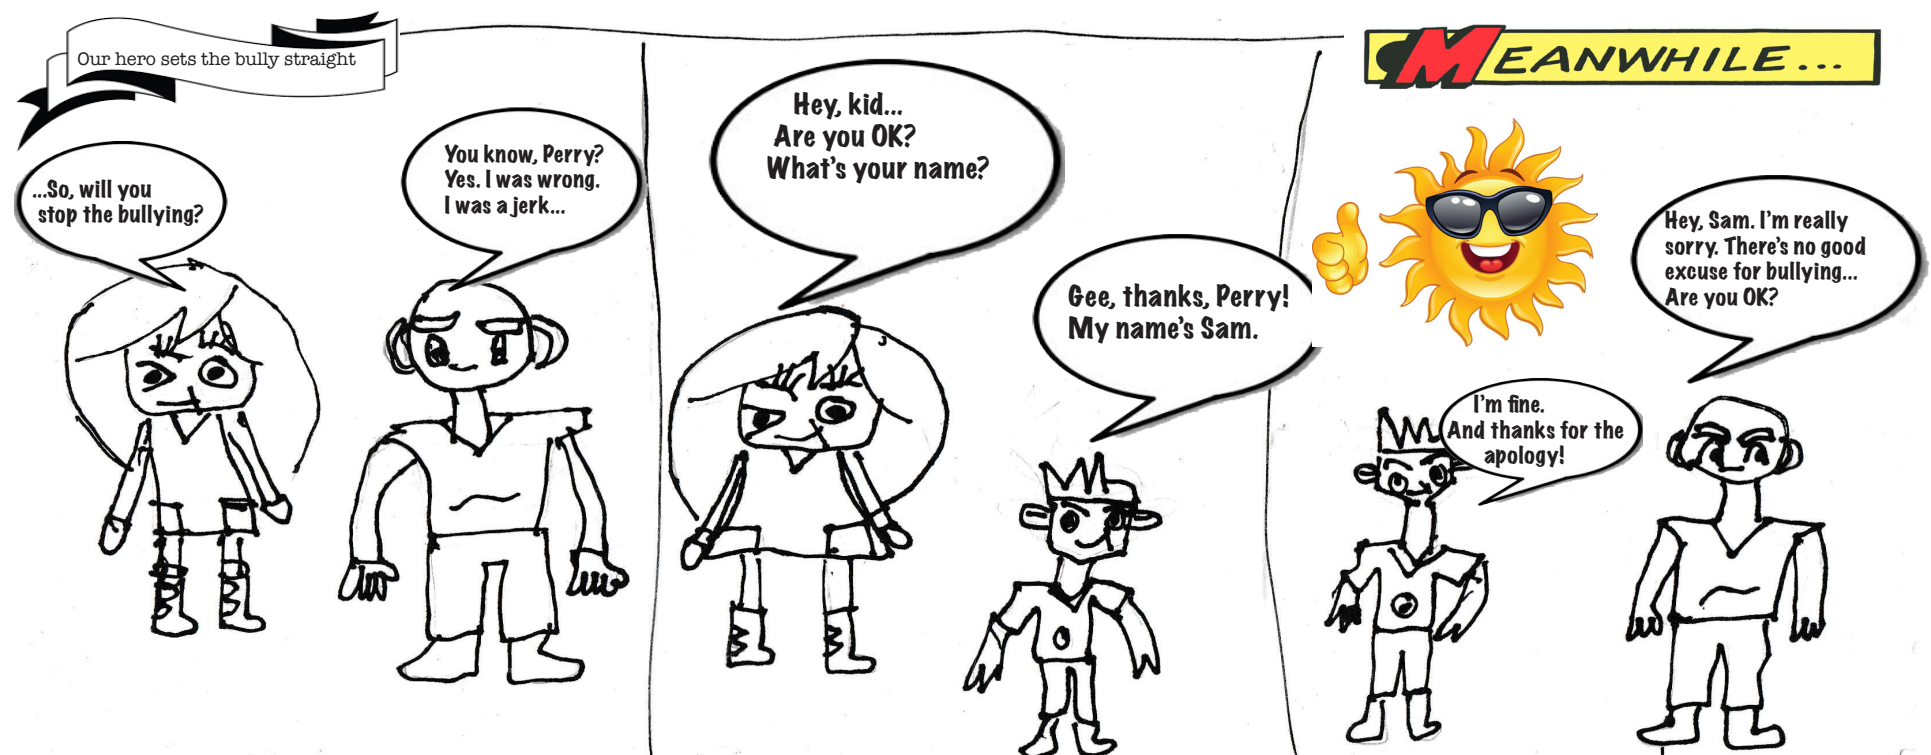

On his final collaboration “When Gloves Come Off” Ryan Beatty is featured. This track is about how in the winter when you have gloves on to warm your hands from the cold, you finally take them off and it feels as if you can’t feel your hands.

The EP receives a solid eight out of ten. It is very instrumental and Christmas-like, which gives its own vibe out that makes it different from all other Christmas albums we regularly play. Tyler, The Creator stayed true to his intentions and had a success remaking the original soundtrack into his own for all to hear and enjoy.

Movie Review: Ralph Breaks the Internet

By Bryonnie L. Lowe

Walt Disney Studios; 112 minutes; Rated PG; Produced by Clark Spencer and Directed by Rich Moore and Phil Johnston
Ralph Breaks the Internet, the sequel to Disney’s 2012 video game adventure movie Wreck-It Ralph, returns stars John C.Reilly as Ralph, Sarah Silverman as Vanellope, Jack McBrayer as Fix it Felix, Jr., and introduces two new main characters, Yesss played by Taraji P. Henson, and Shank played by Gal Gadot.

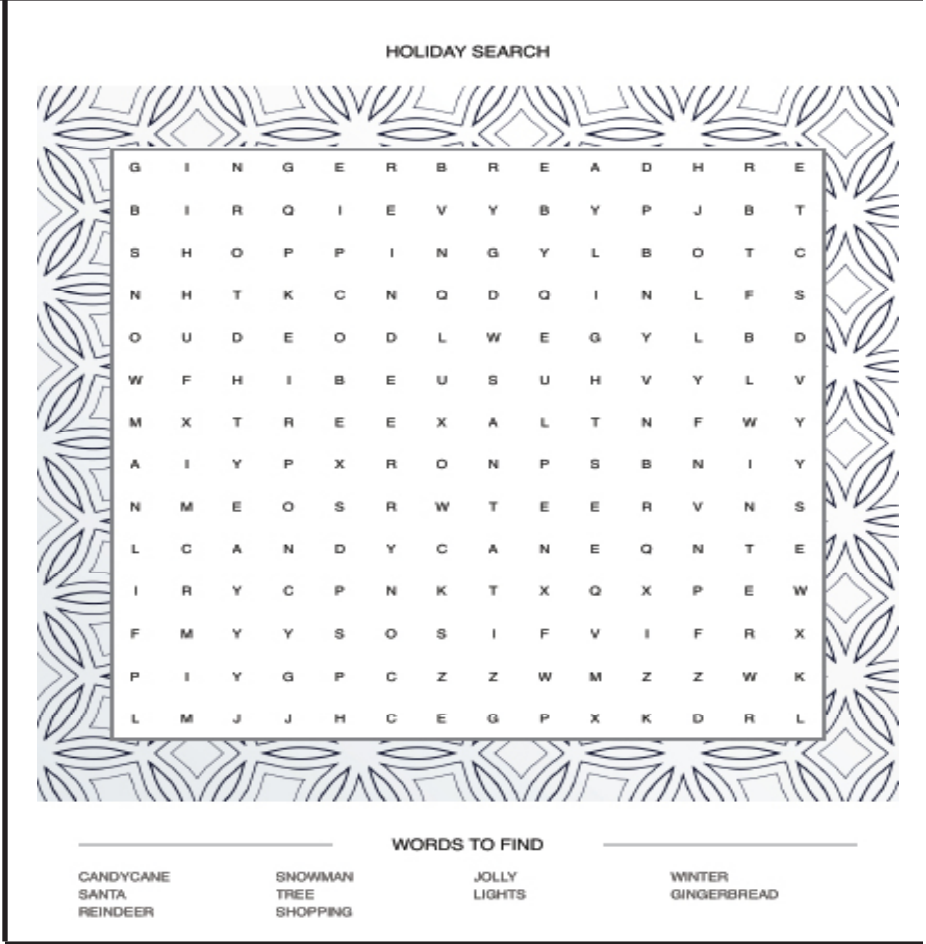

In this amazing movie, Ralph really does break the internet! In the movie, it shows the importance of friendship and the dangers of the internet and how cruel people can be online. The sequences are surprisingly funny and really relative to real things that people go through. I give this movie two thumbs up and a must see.

Video Game Review: Red Dead Redemption 2

By Freddy Sotelo
and Gio Garcia

Rockstar Games, creator of the award-winning series Grand Theft Auto, presents its secondary game in the Red Dead Redemption series, Red Dead Redemption 2. The story is set as a prequel to the first game in the Red Dead series, taking place in the Wild West during 1899. This is the turning point where the life of cowboys is becoming no more, and life is becoming civilized for the new century.

You play as Arthur Morgan, a member in the Van Der Linde group led by a man named Dutch. The group consists of people that needed a family and wanted to belong. Van der Linde is constantly on the move, escaping the law as members of the gang are ex-convicts with large bounties on their heads. In this story, you’re seeking a new home for the group, even if it means vacating the area forcefully.

This game receives a 10/10 from us. It’s a true masterpiece. Although the game is a bit lengthy, 65 hours of game play for the story alone, every single minute was worth playing. Now that the online beta has recently released, we certainly will be coming back for more. The story had us sitting on the edge of our seats, constantly getting curve balls thrown at us. With the dramatic ending that ultimately leads to the first game, this is considered one of the best stories ever told in the history of video games.

This game was reviewed on the Xbox One X console for the best visual experience. Thanks for tuning in to our videogame review, we’ll catch you in our next issue.

Dear Miss Diary...

Dear Miss Diary,

With finals coming up, I’m really stressed out. It doesn’t seem like teachers understand that we have something in EVERY CLASS. I get homework from each one of them every day and it’s honestly so much! I get about 5 hours of sleep because I’m staying up and doing my homework. So, what should I do when it comes to stress? Sometimes I just cry, but it stopped making me feel better a while ago. And honestly, I have stuff at home to deal with. I don’t want to talk to my teachers about all that extra stuff because I’m not one to make excuses for myself. I just want to feel better. How do I survive finals?

Sincerely, Really Stressed Out

Dear Stressed Out,

All you have to do is have good time management skills. Finish up some of your homework here at school, during breaks, and maybe while you’re waiting for your ride home. You can make this work! I understand it’s a lot, and you worry about your future, but you’re overthinking finals. Just study and trust the process of you remembering the information that you need to know. Just don’t stress yourself out, stay calm, and keep grinding!

Sincerely, Miss Diary

Dear Miss Diary,

Lately I’ve been really confused about my priorities. My grades are dropping in school, but I’m just always at practice for sports. I’m getting really frustrated with myself, and I’m not sure what I should be more focused on. I really love my sport, and I cannot just quit. I don’t know how to help myself when it comes to school anymore, and I think I care about my sports a little more. But, honestly, I don’t want to! I want to do well in school, and be a scholar athlete. Any advice?

Sincerely, Scholar Athlete Hopeful

Dear Scholar Athlete,

Honestly, I say put your studies before anything. The love and passion you have for your sport is amazing. But really think about getting somewhere in school. Even if you want to go pro some day, you should always have a back-up plan. Talk to your coaches and teachers, and make a schedule that will help you focus a little more. Go to tutoring for whatever you’re struggling with. No matter what, don’t give up on school. Because even athletes need good grades to get looked at by scouts and colleges. I really believe you can do both. Just make a plan that works for you.

Wrestling Just Getting Warmed Up

By Breanna Sanchez

The Eagles Wrestling squads are off to a good start for the beginning of their season. It is early, non-league play so far, but the athletes are getting warmed up for the 605 League action.

The varsity boys wrestling team took a trip to Santa Barbara with sophomore Hector Ramirez as the overall, lower-weight MVP.

The boys' junior varsity team participated in a dual tournament held by Lakewood. The Eagles also did considerably well against Norwalk High School on the November 29, as boys varsity earned a victory led by team captains Axel Morales, Hector Ramirez, and Angel Juarez. Girls varsity won, too, led by team captains Adriana Vargas, Nicole DeMasi, and Breanna Sanchez.

The boys junior varsity squad lost to Norwalk, but they will meet the Lancers throughout the rest of the season.

On Saturday, December 8, the girls varsity team competed at a large tournament at Santa Ana High School with Nicole DeMasi placing 3rd, Breanna Sanchez placing 7th, and Anela Kramer placing, as well.

The Eagles will continue through their season until February when CIF matches takes place in the new 605 League. Join your Eagles at home after the winter break, as both the girls and boys take on Artesia at home on Thursday, January 10 at 5:30. There will also be a home match against Cerritos on January 17.

* Finally, Lady Eagles Wrestling would like to extend a special thank you to everybody who supported the Lady Eagles Wrestling GoFundMe drive! We appreciate your support.

Eagle Basketball Underway

The boys and girls basketball teams will be having an interesting preseason and regular season. Since they are in a new league, The 605 League, they'll be facing off against new schools like Oxford Academy from Cypress, and Whitney High, a school in Cerritos. They also play against some of the old schools we had in Sub-week, both teams will be playing against our old rival, Norwalk High School. The game will be held at Norwalk High on December 20. Come out and support our fellow Eagles on the road and see Norwalk lose!

The Lady Eagles are off to a better start, with a record of 5-6 in exhibition play so far, including wins in four of their last six games. The Lady Eagles are mostly a young team, led by seniors Berenice Santana, Denise Cardenas, and junior center Dominique Harrison.

And support our Eagles during the winter break, because basketball season will officially begin with 605 League play on January 3, 2019, against Pioneer at home. After a January 5 road game in Cerritos, the Eagles will be playing against Artesia at our Eagles' Nest on Tuesday, January 8. This will be the first day of school after winter break, so it is a good evening to come and support our fellow Eagles at our home "Nest."

As you can see in the schedule (below, left) an evening of games typically looks like this: Girls JV tips off at 3:00pm, followed by Boys JV at 4:30pm; then the Varsity action kicks off with our Lady Eagles at 6:00pm and the Eagles Varsity Boys tipping off at 7:30pm. It is a fun evening of basketball in our gym, so come on out and support the team in 2019!

For the Eagles, head coach Ruben Guerrero brings a roster of six strong seniors, including multi-sport stars like Jourdhin Smith, Joseph Angulo, and Gerardo Vargas. The Varsity team also features a stand-out freshman in Natanael Jacobo.

So far, the boys are off to a slow start with a 2-10 record against some tough competition; but they are fresh off a big win last Thursday against Calvary Chapel, by a score of 59-43, hoping to bring some positive momentum into the 605 League stretch.

Vote for Dress Code!

Student voting on a new dress code rule coming in January

Attention students: For the first time at John Glenn High School, administration is allowing students to have a choice and a vote about the school dress code.

When we return from Winter Break in January, the school will announce a day of voting in the Quad to decide on a new dress code rule about wearing hats on campus. Students will be able to vote on which sport to represent on their heads. You will no longer just be limited to wearing JGHS hats--you will be able to wear a hat representing your favorite team from MLB, NFL, NBA, or NHL.

Once students vote on the new dress code's hat rule, the change will go into effect immediately. Going forward into the 2019-2020 school year, more dress code choices will be made available for students to have a voice. We will announce those when they come up for vote in the future.

But for now, take some time to think about it over the break: Which sport do you want to represent? Baseball (Dodgers, Angels, Yankees, Red Sox, etc.); Football (Rams, Chargers, Raiders, Broncos, etc.); Basketball (Lakers, Clippers, Warriors, Celtics, etc.); Hockey (Kings, Ducks, Red Wings, Knights, etc.). You only get to choose one sport to wear a hat on campus with pride, so cast your vote wisely!
