EAL policy

The EAL department at Abbotsholme school aims to address the academic language needs of Abbotsholme students whose first language is not English. A core principle of the department is the fostering of warm, trusting and caring atmosphere.

We believe in a communicative language teaching approach (CLT) that celebrates and encourages autonomous student learning. The classroom is only part of the learning story. We will show that learning EAL can be creative, interesting and applicable across the entire curriculum. Our approach is influenced by the changing needs and expectations of the students. We will be aware of the benefits and principals of both generic and genre learning contexts, and we will apply the approach that is appropriate, practicable and achievable. Where possible, we will collaborate and work with academic colleagues to make sure our aims, approaches and goals align with their evolving aims, approaches and goals.

Unconscious Bias in the classroom

The EAL department gives consideration to features of unconscious bias that may exist, by being prepared to recognise them, aim to eliminate them and by being prepared to change work differently. Whether the bias is egocentric or confirmation, every effort will be made to respect the distribution of power, and avoid susceptibility through quick decision making.

Entry

Abbotsholme School policy expects a certain language level from those international students joining the school.

The results of the tests will then be discussed within the department and with Admissions and

With consideration to short term pupils enrolled at the school, the EAL department must be willing to accommodate new students and changes to the timetable. Where possible, being proactive and arranging extra lessons for students who require them.

The EAL department must also be willing to welcome students who arrive for taster days and work with the admissions department to ensure the best possible placement for these students according to their language ability.

Marking Policy

The EAL students should complete as much written work as is reasonable in order for the EAL department to keep track of each student's ability to communicate effectively in written English. This will be a manner of continuous assessment which should be recorded punctually and available to the school as a matter of interest for all those teaching the international students.

A minimum of one formal written assignment a week is recommended for all EAL groups. However, in classes that have an over-reliance on electronic translation devices and software, written assignments should be at the discretion of the EAL HOD in order to keep realistic control of what work the students is doing for themselves.

For exam classes, this should be supervised exam practice and level appropriate. Students should be familiar with exam style tasks and these should be used throughout the year to assess student progress.

Marking should be used as a tool for self-correction. Although some errors will be corrected directly by the teacher, the most significant errors should be highlighted as such, and the students will be expected to self-correct. This should be done in a purple pen, and teachers marking to be completed in red.

Teachers must regularly check work and ensure the students are aware when there are errors to correct. Clear expectations should be set out for error correction and what the department expects of the students when they do correct these errors.

Cross-Curricular Work

Although the current policy is for the EAL department to only teach EAL, the department should remain flexible and accommodate other subjects' needs. This can include helping the international students to understand key terminology used in these other subjects. The emphasis of this process is to help students direct their attention on self-correction and independent study. Providing the students, the tools to tackle new words in perhaps unfamiliar topics.

The departments requiring the assistance of EAL, should provide suitable material for these students, such as key word list, revision guides etc.

British Values in the EAL Department

The EAL department provides an ideal setting for the exploration and promotion of British values for international students. We also encourage the participation of British Abbotsholmians in our exploration of British values.

Democracy, the rule of law, individual liberty and mutual respect and tolerance for those with different faiths and beliefs.

The EAL department actively promotes British values by introducing elements of British lifestyle and understanding in EAL lessons. All the course books selected by the department contain elements of British culture and everyday life. Additional materials can be provided to support the main course content.

Elements covered by the EAL department typically include the UK legal system, the British understanding of morality, the UK's political system, the UK's religious diversity, the class system, the UK's education system, the Arts and traditions. Stories within in the British press will be discussed in class, along with different viewpoints to promote the value of democracy. Students will be encouraged to share their viewpoints on different topics, these kinds of lessons and topics will be open to students in Y10 and above. Voting is also used in most classes as a decision-making tool, and students are also encouraged to speak on topics of their own choice. We use this to underline the democratic nature of British society.

Respect for other cultures is promoted through our programme of 'culture exchange activities'. The aim of these activities is to generate interest in and to inform about the overseas student's cultures. Typical events for these are, art-based projects, quizzes, presentations, class discussions.

Independent Learning Statement

One of the EAL Department's key strengths is the opportunity it provides for pupils to practice and hone their independent learning, in lesson time assignment time and in leisure time. Studying EAL in the UK is ideal for independent discovery and the wealth of resources available to the students should be a cornerstone of their own learning pattern. The Abbotsholme EAL department aims to create and authentic and genuine love for learning, with motivated pupils expanding their knowledge and skills through all available channels.

Independent Learning provides pupils with the opportunities and experiences necessary to become capable, self-reliant, self-motivated and life-long learners.
