Eagles Elementary School students raised $21,185 during the school's walk-a-thon fundraiser, and as a reward for their hard work, they get to color their principals on Monday. The students will cover Principal Jennifer Jung and Assistant Principal Patrick Meyer in color powder while the whole school watches and cheers them on at the soccer field behind the school.

Students chosen to color the principals will be the classes that ran the most laps, the class the raised the most money, the student who ran the most laps, and the students that raised the most money during the walk-a-thon.

During the walk-a-thon, students gathered pledges, business donations, and employer matches to donate money based on the distances they covered by walking, running, or jogging around a course at the school on September 29.
