It may be right in the midst of the holiday season, but Ed Clapp Elementary School is skipping ahead to summer. The school's students will enjoy all the fun of summer camp on Tuesday, December 5, as the school is transformed into Camp Read-a-Lot, a summer camp with the goal of turning students into lifetime readers and writers.

Camp Read-a-Lot will feature numerous literacy stations where students and families will participate in reading and writing activities with a camping twist. Activities include reading with flashlights, a school-wide scavenger hunt, creating a book mark craft while listening to a shared reading, vocabulary word mad-libs, and making a fishing pole edible craft, and a camp meal.

Camp Read-a-Lot is the school's Literacy Night.
