The 93 third grade students at Kennedy Elementary School have researched an individual, written his or her biography, and will now slip into character to present that individual in a Living Wax Museum.

The project is part of the curriculum unit on biographies. Students selected an individual whose life they'd like to research, worked on research and note-taking skills, and created a presentation about the individual. Students have chosen notable individuals from all historical eras and avenues, including Elvis Presley, Bill Gates, Amelia Earhart, Babe Ruth, Gabby Douglas, Steve Jobs, Stan Lee, Walt Disney, Jackie Robinson, King Tut, Malala Yousafzai, Henry Ford, and more.

During the Living Wax Museum, students will dress like their researched individual and give a 1-2-minute presentation about that person. Additionally, the students have created a trifold board describing their selected individual and will have artifacts relating to that individual. Parents and special guests have been invited to attend.
