It may not be summer yet and there may still be snow on the ground, but Ed Clapp Elementary School is skipping ahead to summer and all the fun of summer camp on Tuesday, March 21. The school will be transformed into Camp Read-a-Lot, a summer camp with the aim to turn students into lifetime readers and writers.

Camp Read-a-Lot will feature numerous literacy stations where students and families will participate in reading and writing activities with a camping twist.

Activities include reading with flashlights, a school-wide scavenger hunt, creating a book mark craft while listening to a shared reading, vocabulary word mad-libs, and making a fishing pole edible craft, and a camp meal.
