LOOKING AFTER YOUR SPORTSWEAR

- •Turn sportswear inside out before washing Odour-causing bacteria builds up on the inside of your sportswear, so washing inside out will give it a more thorough clean.
- •Wash at 30 40 degrees Celsius Most sportswear is made using synthetic fibres such as polyester and nylon and should be washed in lukewarm or cool-to-warm water (30-40 degrees Celsius). This will help preserve their softness and colour. Hot water can damage these materials causing them to shrink or fade over time.
- Do not use fabric softeners The stretchy and moisture-wick nature of your sportswear doesn't match well with the coating left behind from fabric softener, which makes it harder for water and detergent to fully penetrate the fibres, leading to the build-up of odour-causing bacteria.
- •Fabric softener should also NOT be used on printed garments as chemicals in fabric softener break down the ink in printed logos causing them to fade or crack. Softeners also eat away at the adhesive on heat applied prints causing them to lift then eventually fall off.
- Do not tumble dry your sportswear Agitation and extreme heat will not only damage the fibres of your sportswear but will also amplify odours and can potentially cause heat applied prints to fall off. Instead, just hang or lay your sportswear flat and let it air dry.
- •Always refer to ironing instruction on care label most sportswear if washed & dried correctly should not require ironing, however a very low heat iron setting (1 dot iron symbol) is permitted on certain fabrics. Prints and motifs should not be ironed under any circumstance.
