Pearson responded to the committee's questions regarding professional development and what type of manipulatives are available - they have submitted a notebook for committee review which addresses these questions and other information.

Carnegie Learning has responded to the committees questions, the answers are as follows:

Questions 1 and 2 can be found in the CLC platform, for question 3, see below:

Questions sent from your committee for Elementary Math:

1. Fluency component- can we see the Headline Story and Mental Math slides?
2. For the assessment suite, is there a way for our committee to preview it? If not, what can we show them?
3. Is it only available digitally or will the teachers also receive a hard copy of the assessment book?

The assessments are available digitally as PDFs that can be printed or assigned, and interactive assessments are available for grades 3-5. We do not provide print versions of the digital assessment book.

The committee worked in grade level groups to review the curriculum and complete evaluation rubrics.

7. Public Review of Materials -

Dr. Kim Dodds-Keran

There was one visitor last week; no feedback was submitted. The committee members were asked to communicate with the Cheyenne community that a product has not been selected, and to encourage community members to complete the feedback form when reviewing materials.

8. Committee Updates -

Dr. Kim Dodds-Keran

Houghton Mifflin Harcourt (HMH) update. The committee had asked why HMH did not submit Saxon Math for review. After reaching out to HMH, we were told that when they received our request to participate in the math adoption on November 17, 2023, they decided to submit Math In Focus, which is one of the 4 core programs they will continue to improve and support. At the time, Saxon Math was not going to be available after June 2025. On December 18, 2023 our sales representative was informed that HMH would continue to print Saxon Math 2018, for current customers only, until June of 2027. This was after materials were required to be delivered for review. At that time, HMH had already submitted the product they felt met the criteria of the committee at Cheyenne. After we reached out to HMH, they have agreed to send samples of Saxon Math 2018 for the committee to review. These materials should arrive in time for the next meeting on February 1, 2024.
