PLEASED!

By JOHN82 on July 13, 2013

Style Name: Flat-Free Wheels Verified Purchase

Looks and works good! This 82YO needed a hand truck/cart but was turned off by some of the reviews on other Harper products. When Amazon announced this product, the description and price, even though there were no reviews, seemed just right. No smells no parts broken in shipment. Two pins to convert from hand truck to cart are easy to remove and replace. It handles well on steps. I'm well-satisfied!

Perfect for Home

By Outta Control on August 31, 2014

Style Name: Flat-Free Wheels Verified Purchase

If you told me 10 years ago that I would buy a hand truck on the computer, I would have laughed so hard.

Here it is in 2014 and I did it. I had one similar to this for quite a few years. It was all steel and had air filled wheels. The first time I used it for something heavy, one of the wheels blew out. Fifty dollars got me a new tire and the next time I used it, the other tire blew. I was not going to spend another fifty bucks. I put it on the curb and it disappeared.

I went back to the home improvement stores and could not find one with large enough solid tires. I found this one on Amazon and it fit my needs exactly. I was curious how it would be delivered. It came in a HUGE box.

I have used it to move a stove, refrigerator and dishwasher so far and no problems at all.

better than expected

By jayk on December 28, 2013

Style Name: Flat-Free Wheels Verified Purchase

I was very nicely surprised at quality and versatility and ease of changing from vertical to horizontal. First job a 240lb metal box. Laid truck down switched handle with quick release sturdy pins and away we went. It's very solid, a winner.

Good solid hand truck but with a noxious smell

By C. MCCABE on February 28, 2016

Style Name: Style is 10" Pneumatic Wheels Verified Purchase

Good solid heavy duty hand truck. I haven't tried any super heavy loads like appliances, but I have loaded it up pretty good and it didn't show any signs of stress. The large tires make it easy to move over uneven ground. I have been moving items between two locations 4 blocks apart over uneven sidewalks and fairly steep inclines and it has performed very well. It works great in both the horizontal and vertical positions. Assembly was quick and easy, and switching the handle between the horizontal and vertical positions is easy without the need for tools.

My only complaint is that it has a very strong chemical smell that still persists after a few months, although it has decreased somewhat over time and is not very noticeable when using it, but if left in a small enclosed area, it will slowly fill the air with a noxious smell, so it's best to keep it in a well ventilated area and not in a living space.

With 10" wheels, stair glides are too far from stairs, so wheels just get stuck under the lip of wooden stairs. I think these glides are supposed to be flush with the wheels so that the glide hits the lip of the stairs before the wheel rolls under the stair-lip. I'm going to go out and buy wood strips or PVC pipe to add to the glides in the hopes that this makes them work on the stairs.

I don't know from experience, but I'd speculate that the stair glides look like they would work for the 8" wheels which I believe are inserted into an axle that would make the wheels' outermost edge line up with the glide.

Positives: yeah, it's easily convertible.

light handtruck

I was looking for a light handtruck to move some things to my new house, and found the Harper on Amazon. It was a little more money than I wanted to spend (how often am I going to use this item...), but I priced some of the other handtrucks and a lot of them were made of steel so likely very heavy (I'm an "older" small female). I got the handtruck and it is very light, but sturdy and I like that I can convert it to a flatbed so it makes it useful for other tasks.

very good performer for this price range

I have only used it for a couple hundred pounds but it seems stiff and strong. the wheels and bearings are good quality. compared to others at this price point, 5/5. if I used it more frequently, I would go with pneumatic tires though

Glad we found the Harper Trucks!

Looked at dollies and hand trucks of similar quality and features at local hardware stores priced at $200 - $400, but then found this one a Amazon for 1/3 of the price. We move numerous cases of water around a warehouse, shipping and receiving to distribute the bottles back out on to the streets to 80,000 + homeless in the Southern California region. The last dolly's wheels collapsed under the stress and weight. But this one is seriously rated to carry up to 700 lb. per load. Yesterday we had it stacked 5 cases high and three across with cases (24/36) of 18 oz Arrowhead water bottles . It handled perfectly under the weight. Also discovered that in a few seconds it converts from dolly to hand truck and vice versa. Don't know why we waited this long to do the homework and put the proper equipment in the warehouse, but glad we found the Harper Truck with 700 lb. capacity. Noticed that it steers nicely making it easy for one person to push, guide and handle.
