Whose Bite Is It Anyway?

Dental students completed a forensics lab this week. Students had an opportunity to make imprints of their teeth and map those imprints onto a transparency sheet. Later in the week, students were given four different candies to bite to make imprints on. Then students matched whose candy imprint aligned with their transparency sheet. Left, CEHS junior Sophie Hoene closely inspects the bite marks on the candy compared to the bite mark impressions on the transparency sheet.

After several busy weeks of preparing for the traffic stop practical demonstration that concluded earlier this week, Criminal Justice students took advantage of the great November weather by flying drones. Pictured above, CEHS senior Katie Hagan concentrates on handling her drone as another buzzes by.

Students in Fashion and Textiles and Housing and Interior Design showcased fashion trends through the decades. During this unit, students learned how historical events affected fashion as well as how fashion impacts the media.
