Parent/Guardian	Sushanta	Das	sushanta96@gmail.com	Education is the backbone of a nation, and in nation building we need students representation from society. Towards providing access to the best forms of education we have to make sure that education reaches to students of all races and class. Our founding fathers have always dreamt of an America where people of all color and race live together in harmony and justify what true democracy is. I have been living in this country, courtesy to my deep inclination towards graduate studies. And United States was always my best bet for my research interests where I could access the best facilities be in the laboratories or the best teaching environment where you are encouraged to try and fail and try again until you succeed. My PhD years in graduate school has also provided me the chance to teach undergraduate students for 5 years. Those experience would very much help me in identifying the gaps in the system, and help fixing those thereby enabling a better environment for a learning platform
