

THE PILGRIM

LA PALOMA EDITION

1931

FOREWORD

To perpetuate the spirit of comraderie that has bound us together during these years;

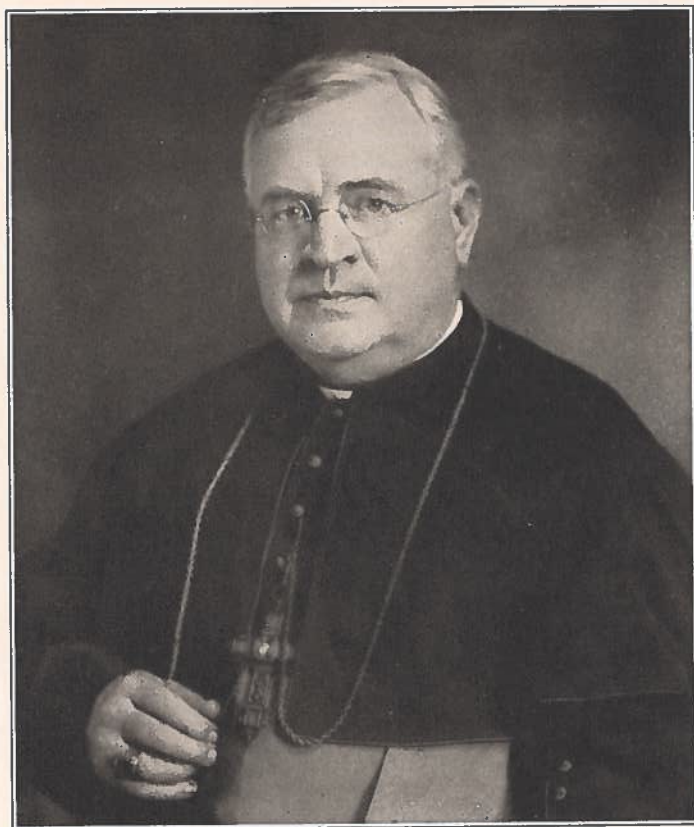

To commemorate the gladsome days of each and every student of the Corpus Christi College-Academy during the scholastic year of 1930-1931;

To present in a lasting form the lights and shadows of an eventful year;

To hold before those who will carry on in the future the toils and labors of those who have gone before;

To hold back the veil of oblivion lest it cover the happy memories of the past—

These are the reasons that prompted the "La Paloma" Edition of The Pilgrim.

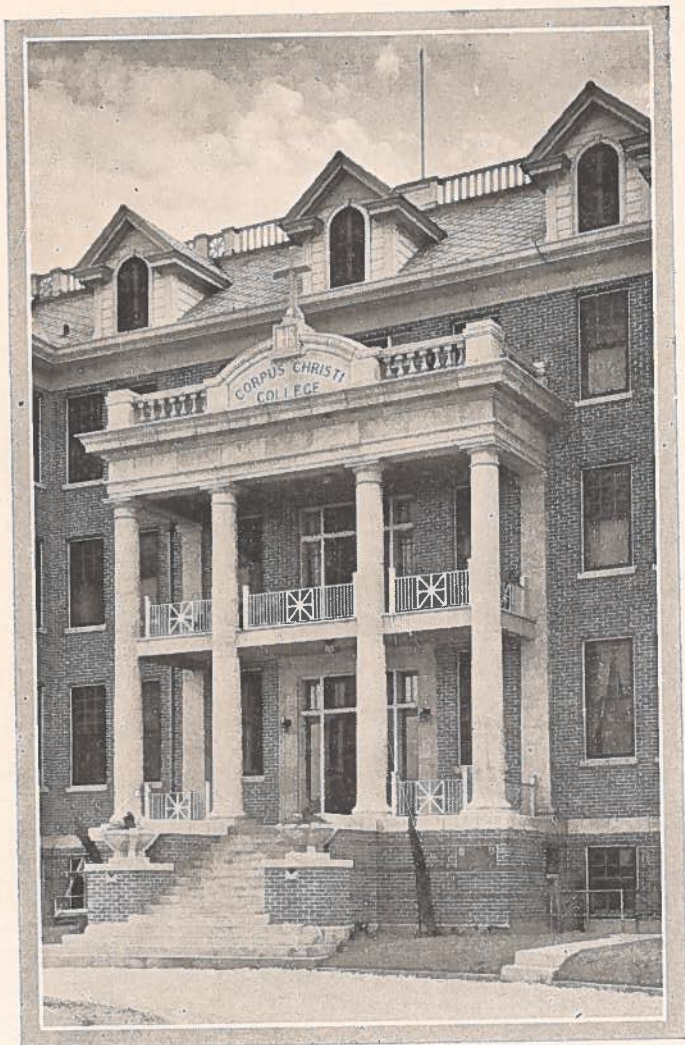

Right Reverend
EMMANUEL B. LEDVINA, D. D.,
Bishop of Corpus Christi

Few will be able to realize the extent of the work of Right Reverend Bishop E. B. Ledvina in behalf of the Corpus Christi College-Academy. His friendship has been enduring; his encouragement has been unfailing; and his liberality in equipping the institution has been nothing short of bounteous.

Right Reverend Monsignor
JOHN J. LANNON, Ph. D.

The interests of the Corpus Christi College-Academy have been uppermost in the mind of Monsignor Lannon. Year after year and on times untold he has found methods and means to increase the enrollment. The library has especially profited by his generosity. He has worked unobtrusively, yet effectively.

"Through columned portals to the citadel of learning."

THE SCHOOL

Over eighty years ago when Corpus Christi was still an outpost on one of America's last frontiers, the John Dunn family, known throughout the length and breadth of South Texas, settled in the newly formed Nueces County. They obtained a site of land some four miles west of Corpus Christi Bay and in close proximity to Nueces Bay, to the south. By industry and by dint of hard labor, Mr. Dunn succeeded in maintaining himself and his family during the difficult times that followed immediately upon the close of the War with Mexico and the Civil War.

The youngest son, who had been named for his father, John Dunn, Jr., fell heir to the property of the family. Being desirous of promoting the common welfare of the community, and of perpetuating the memory of his father, he offered to the Right Reverend Bishop E. B. Ledvina, the old homestead, to be given over to a Catholic religious order that would found and conduct an educational institution for boys.

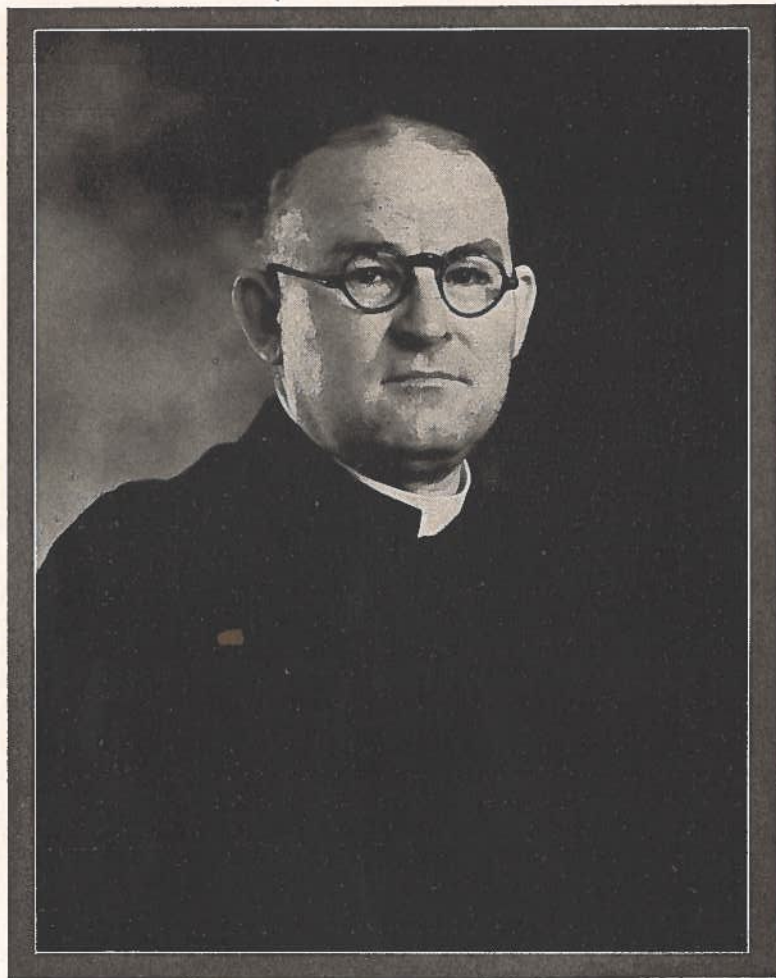

The Right Reverend Bishop succeeded in 1927 in inducing the monastic chapter of New Subiaco Abbey, in Arkansas, to undertake the founding and manning of the contemplated institution. From that time dates the history of Corpus Christi College.

The school opened its doors in 1928 with a particularly gratifying enrollment. Six instructors were engaged for the first year. The State Department of Education recognized the school as a four-year high school and placed it on the list of approved high schools. In addition, partial accrediting was earned during the first year.

The second scholastic year opened with an enrollment that was satisfactory. Two instructors were added to the faculty. The equipment, which the State Department of Education had found adequate in its inspection during the foregoing year, was expanded. The school was again commended for its excellent physical plant and for its careful work. Additional credits were earned.

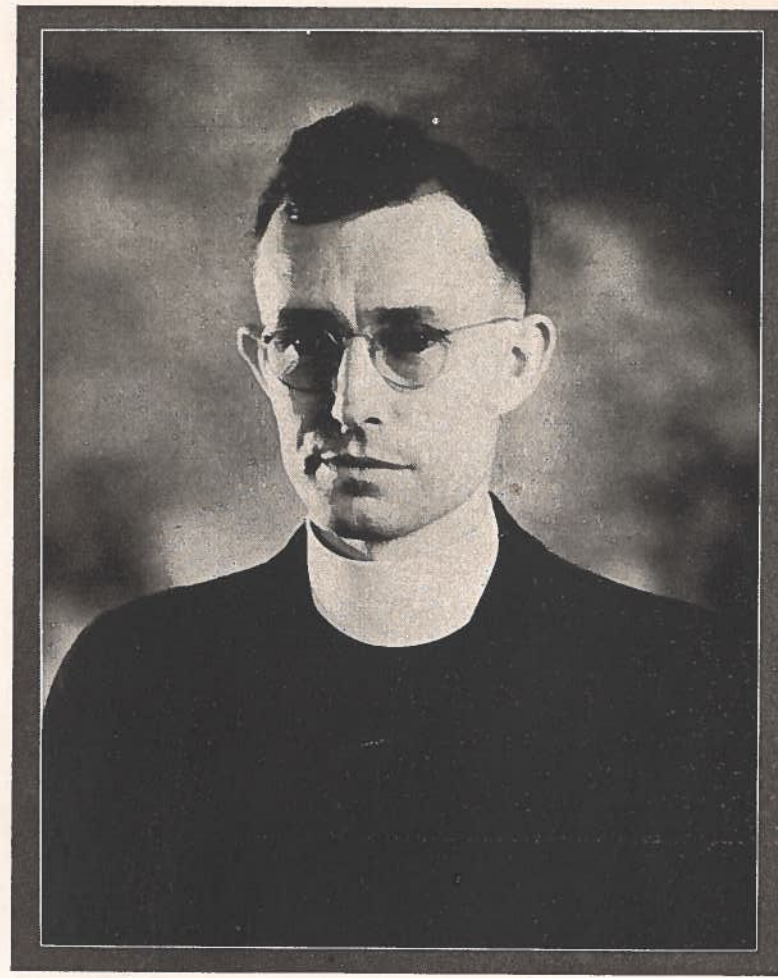

The current and third year found another increase in the number of students. Increased activity was evident on all sides—in scholastic work, in extra-curricular organizations, and in athletics. Another member was added to the faculty, and the curriculum increased by several courses. Accrediting with the State Department of Education has gone on apace, so that by the time that the fourth session of the school opens, the school hopes to have received complete and adequate recognition from standardizing agencies.

While the school is yet a high school, it is contemplated that sooner or later expansion will permit the addition of college courses. The institution feels that only in this manner can it serve the people and the youth of South Texas adequately, and fulfill the intentions that its founders had in view.

Reverend
PAUL M. NAHLEN, O. S. B.
President
Religion, Bookkeeping

A broad humanity that knows no limits in its service finds an example in Rev. Father Paul. No phase of the school's activity fails to feel the touch of his experienced hand. To Father Paul the students herewith pay tribute for his fatherly interest and for his faithful cooperation.

Reverend
JOSEPH P. FUHRMANN, O. S. B.
Director of Studies
Latin, Mathematics, History, Science,
Industrial Geography

Education achieves results, in a great measure, from a sympathetic understanding of the student's needs. Father Joseph is a man who understands these. No petition is too lowly to elicit his attention and no complaint too trivial to merit his hearing. To the Director of Studies—a sympathetic moulder of character—the students pledge their loyalty.

Herewith we present the first representative class of seniors of the Corpus Christi College-Academy. Up to the present, no epic has sung the achievements of a senior class because we have been content to pursue the even tenor of our ways conjointly with the other classes of the school, and more specifically with the junior class.

However, having now arrived in port, freighted with the full cargo of four years of high-school education, we feel justified in lifting the bushel from our light with pomp, energy and dispatch, as the pages hereinafter displayed will eloquently prove. We point with pride to the things we have done, which we hope will develop into traditions—when a true historical perspective shall have become evident—for we realize that without traditions the soul of a school slumbers.

Let us point out merely a few of our accomplishments here. Witness the creations of our minds in this the "La Paloma" Edition, assembled by the deft hand of Philip N. Byrne; gaze on the past five numbers of The Pilgrim, which contain the labor of A. Oreschnigg, George Walt, Jr., Philip N. Byrne, Robert I. Howell, Harold T. Bailey, Martin Klockenkemper, and Jay F. Robinson. Attend our prowess on the gridiron while you observe Captain Robinson, lithe Oreschnigg, linesmen Bailey and Gallagher, backfield Klockenkemper, signal barker Rossi, and cheer leader Walt. Turn to the musical organizations and you will there find the name of George Zotz.

And if you are not convinced that activity marks us individually and collectively, and that we have not progressed through the years successfully, then watch us through the coming years. We bid you take up our argument as will be set forth in the fulfilling of our pledge of support and loyalty to Corpus Christi College in the years to come, when we hope to carry out in practical life what we have learned and loved to do in school.

Undaunted by the initial reverses which for a time threatened the ultimate publication of a yearbook, the special edition staff has worked courageously on. The original plans called for a pretentious edition, larger in scope and more attractive in make-up, than any former student publication. However, when this became impossible, it was decided to issue a special edition of the regular monthly publication.

Consequently, in spite of adverse conditions, the staff has assembled the third complete account of the yearly activities of Corpus Christi College. They have named it the "La Paloma" Edition in order to keep the identity of the former yearbook.

After toiling for nine months, The Pilgrim, student monthly publication, is about to end its third pilgrimage. The last issue, which will be published early in June, will contain the final articles of a number of staffmen who have worked industriously for three years.

During these three years, the paper has prospered. It has become a vital organ in student life. More than that, it has been financially stabilized; its reputation has been established. There is but one regrettable fact that appears at the close of the year: several efficient and willing staff members of 1930-31 will be lost by that implacable enemy of all campus organizations—by graduation. But the work of those who will leave has been sufficiently grounded so that those who come after will be able to carry on. This they will be determined to do.

THE YEAR

During the past year the student choir experienced its most successful season since its organization. It kept step with the rapid strides of music progress at the college. Mrs. J. V. Nestor, the directress, succeeded by dint of generous labor to perfect an organization that has done creditable work.

The choir was regularly heard on several days each week as well as on Sundays during the chapel services. It reached its height of performance on St. Benedict's Day, when it succeeded in giving a splendid rendition of Hamma's Mass in Honor of St. Dominic. On this particular occasion also, the choir rendered a surprisingly good interpretation of Gregorian Plain Chant. The latter is particularly deserving of recognition, as most directors find it almost impossible to train high school students to execute the delicate neums of the Solemn chant with precision and correctness. Consequently, the choir deserves to be complimented upon its progressiveness and efficiency.

THE YEAR

Conductor James C. Moore and the members of his Cavalier Band of 1930-31 have just completed their most successful season. Their popularity is attested to by the fact that they were in constant demand for municipal celebrations, school festivities, and over the radio. Through faithful and energetic work Mr. Moore has this year succeeded in bringing recognition to the department of music, which was a wish that the institution had harbored for some years.

The first three months were not particularly fruitful of public performances. This time was devoted mainly to preparation for the strenuous season ahead. And well did the director prepare, for once the organization had made its debut, its services were constantly in demand.

Accordingly, on February 13 and again on the 27, the Cavalier Band was heard in programs over station KGFI. The versatility of these concerts elicited the admiration of radio fans generally. The final radio broadcast was given on May 19 and this program probably marks the high-water mark of music activity at Corpus Christi College.

In the Gold Star Mothers Court of Honor celebration, which was the outstanding county-wide celebration of the year, the band was prominent in the colorful parade that preceded the ceremonies.

The Cavalier organization was chosen to furnish the music for a theater performance given for the benefit of the Spohn School of Nursing, and also for a similar program staged for the Disabled Veterans Organization. Finally, the services of Mr. Moore's Cavaliers were requisitioned for the opening of the Rio Grande Valley Baseball League in Corpus Christi.

The Band will lose several of its most efficient members this year, but Conductor Moore with his characteristic optimism promises that the structure which he laid the past year in band activity was merely the foundation for something more imposing for the coming season.

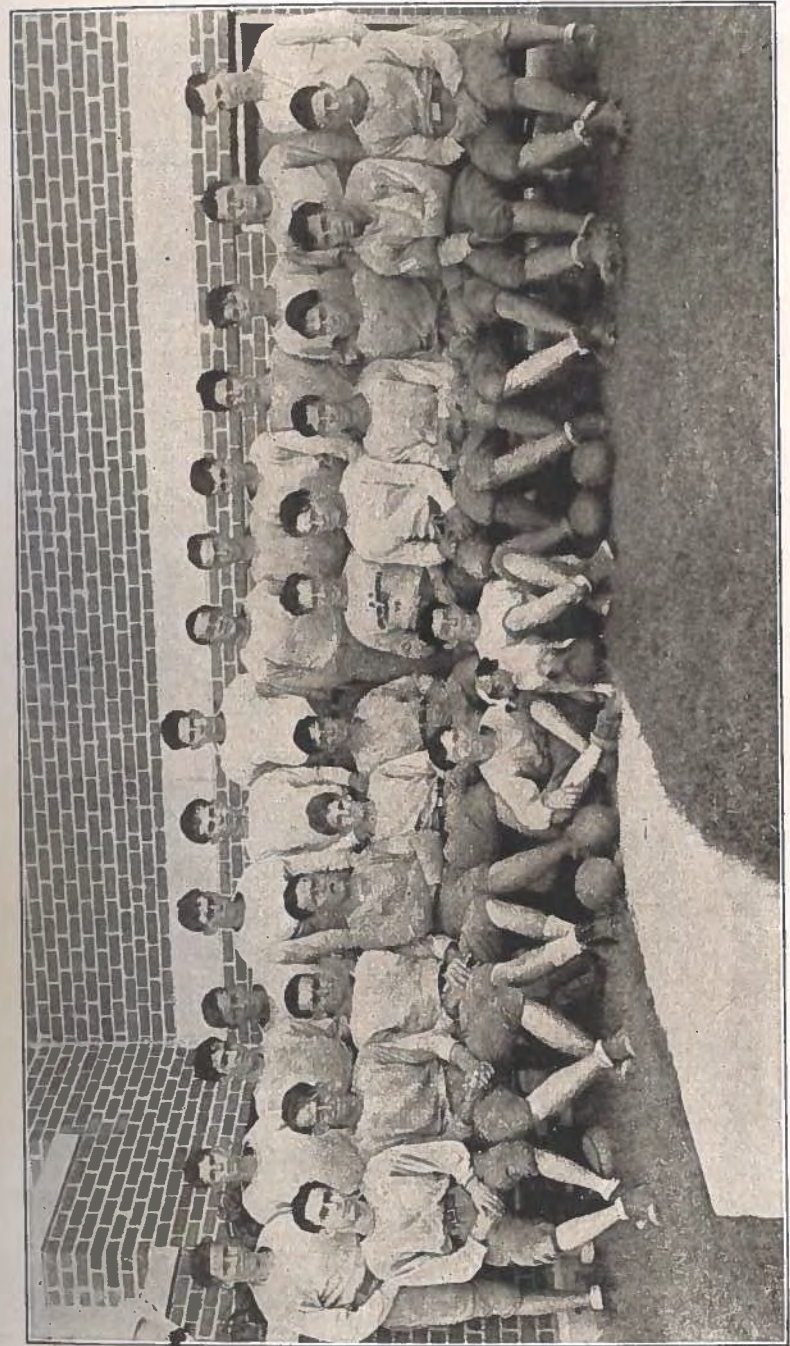

THOMAS E. QUIGLEY
Coach

The man who perseveres will eventually speak of victories. This very fittingly and appropriately tells the story of the work of Coach Thomas E. Quigley, for the past three years athletic director at the college-academy. After the seemingly disparaging results of the first two years, Coach Quigley can look back on the past year and contemplate a series of successes, which shattered even his fondest hopes and aspirations of three standing.

In both football and baseball he can speak of numerous victories won. These victories, however, consist in something more than games to the credit of his teams. He points to his success mainly in the building up of players who will form his foundation until oncoming raw material can be developed; he can tell of the awakening of the students to a live participation in athletics, the lack of which proved a source of annoyance during the first two years. And what is very important, he has this year demonstrated that he is capable of implanting a sense of reliability in his charges, so that, when he has given his final "three little words" before he discharges the team from the dressing room before the game, he can depend upon the players to go out on the field and give their utmost.

In substance, Coach Quigley has presented the school with an athletic record which merits the attention of all sport-loving people. And this he has accomplished principally by his efficient, consistent, and persevering building. All praise, then, to Quigley the Builder.

FOOTBALL

Who will be able to forget the amazing performance of the dashing Cavaliers of the past season? The enthusiasm of the spectators and the din of the crowds are still the subject for discussion. The team was unknown for two years, while it struggled bravely on for a place in the sun. But during the 1930 season the players came out from behind a cloud and performed in such a manner that they elicited the wonder of the teams they met. They fought for a name; they fought for their coach. And did succeed? The following accounts vouch for their success.

C. C. C. 0—ALICE 0

The opening performance, on September 20, was staged on the home field when the Cavaliers met the Coyotes from the Alice High School. More than a modicum of anxiety was evident in the home camp before the game. The visitors were rated as a far superior team. In fact, these same opponents had administered a very sound drubbing to the collegians scarcely two years before. And the confidence which this gave them boded no good for the Cavaliers. Coach Quigley injected his best material into the game. But at best it was for the greater part untried and untested. Nevertheless, the Quigleymen repeatedly withstood the opponents, and very obviously when threatened in the danger zone. It was a terrific game. But no team could muster sufficient strength to break the scoreless procedure. And such it remained—a scoreless tie.

C. C. C. 33—ROCKPORT 6

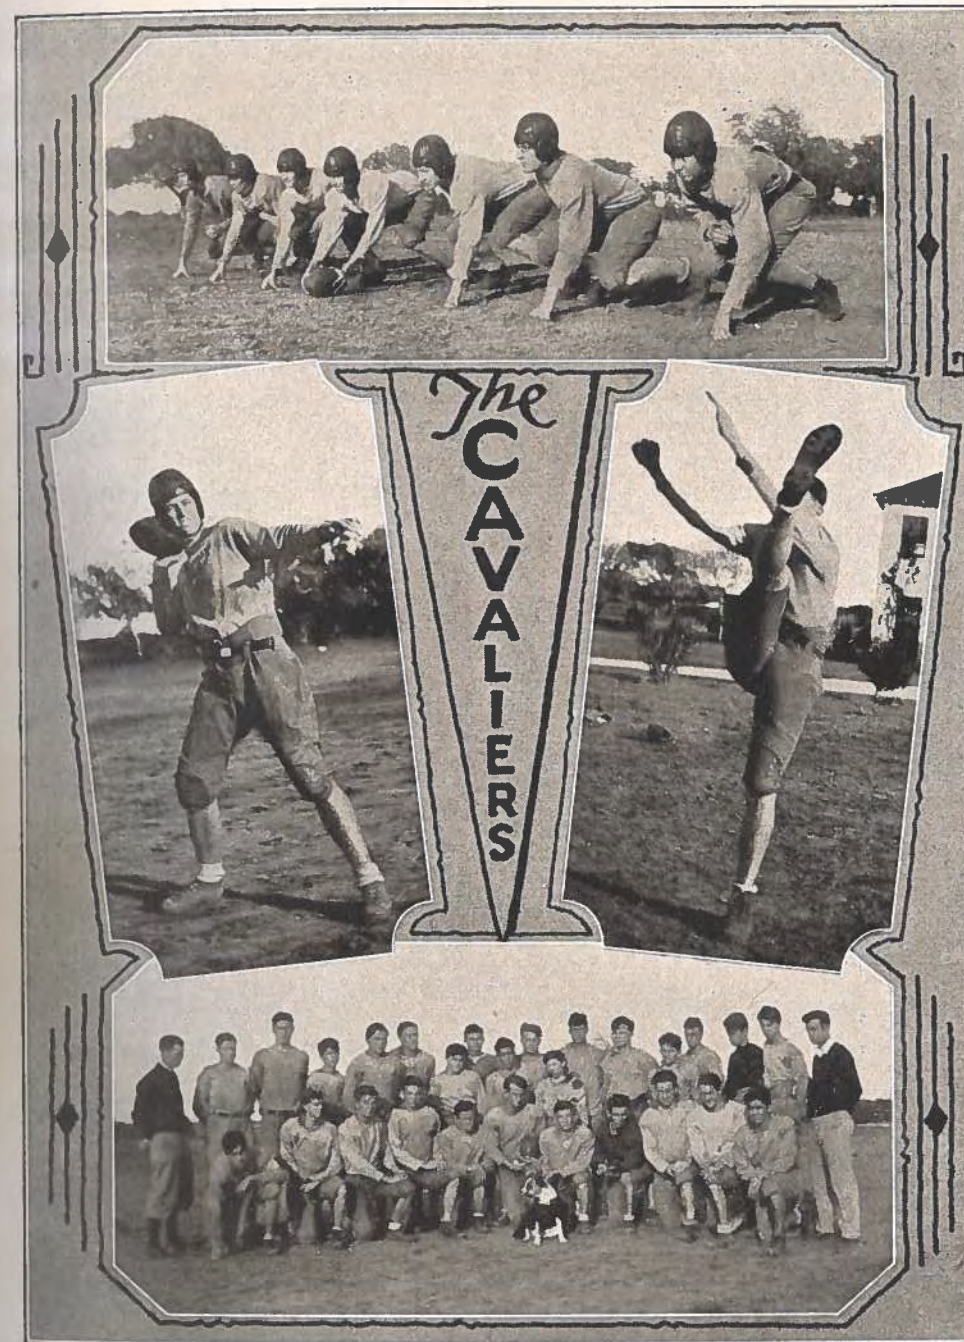

After having realized the extent of their power, the Cavaliers set themselves seriously to the task of winning games. In the second encounter they smashed through with a victory over Rockport High School on the home field on September 27. The spell was broken. For the first time the College-Academy football team had scored. The final count: Cavaliers 33—Rockport 6.

C. C. C. 6—TAFT 7

The two-year losing streak was broken. But there was yet another feat to be performed: the team had to win away from home. This they set to do when they made preparations to muzzle the Taft Greyhounds on the latter's own field on October 3. And the game might have been won had it not been for one of those little incidents which the sports world recognizes as a break. A triple-threat man on the opponents' line-up, whom the Cavaliers had been able to check throughout the greater part of the game, slipped through for a touchdown, and a moment later added the extra point. But the seven point lead warmed the knights to vengeance, and in less time than it takes to relate, but with more power than words can describe, they came back to score a touchdown. And then the break came. An off-sides penalty cost the extra point which would have tied the score. As it was it ended 6-7, and the first defeat of the season went in the scorebook.

C. C. C. 38—SINTON 0

The Cavaliers came off the field of their third game battle-scared and somewhat crest-fallen. But they had taught surrounding teams to respect Quigley's Cavalier hosts. Consequently, intensive preparations were evident in all camps to stop the rush of the locals. But that was impossible. The team gathered momentum as it went along. This was drastically demonstrated when they stole the treasure trove from the Pirates' own treasure box, and left the opponents "pointless". The final score: Cavaliers 38—Sinton 0.

FOOTBALL—(CON.)

C. C. C. 0—FALFURRIAS 13

But the jinx of losing games away from home still pursued the Cavaliers. Their inability to shake this off was responsible for their second defeat, on October 18, when they dropped a hotly contested game to the Falfurrias Jerseys. The opponents had recruited a number of stars of other days in order to stop the Cavaliers' series of wins. Much brilliant playing as well as some costly fumbling characterized the Cavalier-Jersey tangle. The score: Cavaliers 0—Jerseys 13.

C. C. C. 7—ARANSAS PASS 7

Determined to retrieve their loss, the Cavaliers returned home for the sixth game with a foe of long standing, the Bisons from Aransas Pass. The teams fought to a death struggle on Cavalier field on October 25. It was a gruelling game from beginning to end, for it is tradition that when Cavalier meets Bison, neither will give quarter on any condition or terms. The game resulted in the third tie for the Quigley men: 7-7.

C. C. C. 45—HEBBRONVILLE 0

Then came performance No. 7, played at Hebronville on November 1. And for the first time, the Knights succeeded in breaking their off-campus jinx. They completely routed the Hebronville eleven to the score of 45-0.

C. C. C. 35—THREE RIVERS 0

Christening Day came on November 8. To celebrate the occasion, Quigley had engaged the flashy Three Rivers team for a game on the home field. There was nothing able to check the onrush of the newly christened team. Once they were started they seemed to be able to score at will until late in the game when the opponents stiffened. The game ended with score 35-0.

C. C. C. 6—BEEVILLE 0

But the worst was yet to come. A defeat sustained at the hands of the Beeville Trojans two years before still demanded retribution. The wound that had been inflicted on that occasion back in 1928 had not healed. It was the final battle of the year; the Collegians had hitherto been undefeated on their own field. These things conspired to make the Cavaliers give their utmost attention to the preparation for the game. Quigley sent his charges out on the field against the Trojans on November 20. The tide of fortune swayed first on one side and then on the other. And then in one final spurt, the Cavaliers, employing all the resources that they had amassed through a strenuous season, pushed through an opening which spelled defeat for the district-champion Trojans. And what is more important, they succeeded in following through their advantage by holding the desperate Trojans from pushing too far in their anabasis toward the goal line. At the sound of whistle the score stood: Cavaliers 6—Trojans 0.

It would be particularly difficult to single out the individual players of the team who were outstanding, for the fact is that Captain Robinson had under him a team, each member of which was energetic, and alert. It was not only a team, but that which it takes to make a team, individual performers all working in close harmony.

And finally, commendation must be given to the Vaqueros, second team, who on more than one occasion did much to hold the fort until "the regulars could arrive." They bore a lion's share in the work of the season, and should easily maintain the prestige of the 1930 team, when they mature into Cavaliers.

MISS LORETTO ROBINSON

After having gone nameless for over two seasons, the college-academy athletic teams were christened on November 7. The selection of a name was placed in the hands of a committee, which conducted a contest, sponsored by the two local newspapers. Approximately fifty suggestions were submitted; in fact, so many names appeared on the list that the judges were in a quandary, until by the process of elimination, they were able to decide upon the name "Cavaliers". The second choice was the "Vaqueros", by which the second teams were henceforth to be known.

The honor of having named the school's team went to Miss Loretto Robinson, sister of the team's captain, Jay F. Robinson. And as if fortune had the habit of smiling benignantly upon the Robinson family, it happened that the second choice was also won by a member of that family, none other than Jay F. Robinson himself. In this, however, his honors were shared by a teammate, Philip N. Byrne.

Father Paul presided over the christening ceremonies. In an address he explained the meaning of the newly-chosen name. He urged the players to live up to the qualities which the name implied—particularly that of chivalry—which he referred to as synonymous with sportsmanship. And then, after the curiosity of all bystanders has been sufficiently aroused, in true medieval manner and with a clear ringing voice he pronounced the "I dub this team the Cavaliers", amid the plaudits of the populace.

BASEBALL

The team which represented the College-Academy on the baseball field in the spring of 1931 has just finished the most successful season in the history of baseball at the school. The players closed the season with a percentage of .900, which translated into games means nine games won and one lost. Quigley's men played in good style, often against teams of much more experience. But what they lacked in experience they made up for in a good knowledge of baseball science. In more than one game they succeeded in staging a rally to come from behind in the ninth or tenth inning. This was done through their faultless execution of baseball fundamentals.

The pitching staff was composed of two capable twirlers, Martin Klockenkemper and Herman Harrod. Klockenkemper, hero of many sand lot performances, was a calm pitcher, whose offerings played havoc with the batting average of more than one star slugger. Harrod, the big right-hander from Orange Grove, received his first experience this year, and acquitted himself in splendid fashion. Harrod enjoys the added distinction of leading the batting averages.

Chris Guzman was a worthy handler of the best pitching the team had. His judgment was his leading asset, and on many occasions it was almost uncanny. Herbert Bockholt and Bill Rhodes alternated at cavorting around the initial sack. Bill was, besides, a dangerous hitter.

Miniature Jack Grant covered the keystone sack in great shape. Nor did his small stature keep him from pulling out of the air some occasional miss-directed throws from the catcher. Martinez covered short-stop. He was easily the leading infielder on the team. Third base was controlled by Nick Rossi. His hitting and fielding was seldom spectacular, but he was reliable and was always effective in the pinches.

The outfield was patrolled by Jay F. Robinson, Hal McCaleb, and Arthur Oreschnigg. To Robinson goes the honor of having been credited with the only home run of the season. Oreschnigg was frequently seen meeting the ball in foreign territories, a matter that was easy for him on account of his speed. To him also must credit be given for having won the very important and final game of the season, when his three base clout brought in the winning talley.

Others who served as utility men, and who must not be overlooked include Phil Byrne, Milton Adams, Owen Gallagher, George Walt, and James E. Weber.

The complete results of the season are as follows:

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

The compilation of this book is incomplete until a word of acknowledgment has been said in appreciation of the good will of those who made this edition possible; it is a matter of giving justice where justice is due.

We have in mind first of all the advertisers, whose generous support has greatly contributed to the success of this booklet. Their co-operation moves us to urge all college-academy men to consider them whenever possible; to patronize them as an advertiser in the "La Paloma" Edition should be patronized; to think of them as such who have taken an interest in the school's activities.

We, furthermore, wish to express our appreciation to the members of the Corpus Christi Printing Company, who in the brief span of time allotted to them in which to complete the work, have been very considerate in expediting the work and in working for its timely completion.

On the part of the college officials, a public expression is herewith made to all who have in any way helped the school, encouraged it, and exhibited their benevolence, during the past year. Principally do they wish to express their gratitude to the two outstanding benefactors, Right Reverend Bishop E. B. Ledvina, D. D., and Right Reverend Monsignor John J. Lannon, Ph. D.

In addition, the following are remembered:

- Very Rev. Peter C. Illigen;
- All donors of scholarships;
- All donors of gold medals;
- Mr. John Dunn and family.
