of military bearing. His clothes were somewhat worn, but his shoes were polished and his suit neatly pressed. He bowed politely to Nancy and introduced himself as Philip March.

"Oh, yes, my father is expecting you. Please come in."

Nancy led the man into the living room where Carson Drew was waiting. When she started to leave, the man insisted that she stay and hear his story. He sank wearily into a chair.

"I owe you an apology, Mr. Drew, for asking such a strange favor," he began in a tired voice. "A feeling of desperation came over me this afternoon. On the spur of the moment I decided to come to your office. You and your daughter have helped so many people, I thought you might advise me."

"The man was very pale and ill at ease. The only thing I could do was to get him a cup of fresh-brewed coffee. This seemed to do some good and Mr. Drew then inquired what writer of the letters was someone else's name."

"Yes, he was my son. My only son," the caller said sadly. "In fact, he was my only child and a soldier in the army, but he has been gone four years ago on a mission."

"I'm sorry to hear that," she said sympathetically, and Nancy added a word of condolence. "Fipp—that's what my Philip called himself

April is National Poetry Month!

We are diving deep into the various dynamics of poetry – everything from Haiku's to Sensory to Blackout.

These amazing students are learning how to freely express themselves through words and their corresponding illustrations, I absolutely LOVE it!

We will have our next Book Swap in May... details will be sent home for that soon.

The last day to check-out a library book is Friday, May 3rd; all books MUST be returned by Friday, May 10th.

This month in music we have started going around the world with music. We have been learning about music from Japan. This has included learning about Taiko Drumming which is 50% drumming 50% dance. I have enjoyed teaching about this culture and hope your child has also been enjoying learning about this as well. I can't wait to fill you in next month on the countries we've "visited."

The students had a blast during our Jump Rope Unit last month. I was amazed to see the student's improvement from last year. They enjoyed receiving their different belts in their quest to get their black belt.

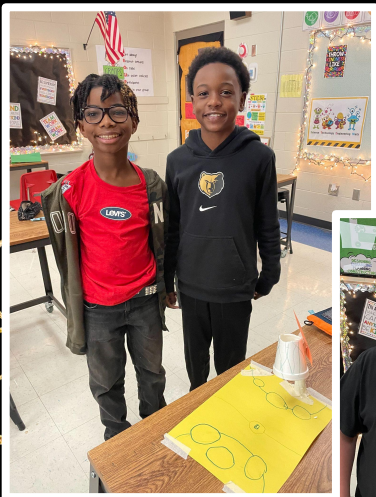

If you have any questions or concerns, please reach out to me.

STEM

Mrs. Bowen

We have been super busy in STEM here lately finishing up our basketball goals to go along with March Madness.

Students were given different materials to use to construct a basketball goal, court, and ball. We had so much fun with our Solar Eclipse activity as well. The older grades researched and turned their research into google slides. Younger grades watched a couple of videos about the solar eclipse as well as illustrated their own solar eclipse! Feel free to email me with any questions or concerns!
