NURSE'S CORNER

Is Your Child Too Sick for School?

Early in the morning it is often difficult to make a decision about whether or not your child is sick enough to stay home from school. With minor symptoms, you often cannot tell whether your child is going to get better or worse during the course of the day. Here are some tips to help:

The main reasons for keeping your child home are:

- Your child's too sick to be comfortable at school.
- Your child might spread a contagious disease to others.

As a rule of thumb a child should stay home if they have:

- A fever (100.4 or greater) in past 24 hours
- Vomited in past 24 hours
- Diarrhea
- A very frequent cough
- Persistent pain
- A widespread rash

These problems may need to be discussed with your child's pediatrician to determine if an office visit is needed.

When can my child return to school after illness?

- Fever free for 24 hours without the use of fever reducing medication
- Vomit and diarrhea free for 24 hours

Your cooperation will keep our students and staff as healthy as possible.

SELF-CARE CORNER BY ELLIE FARRIBA

As we begin a new year teaching, remember to focus on some well-deserved self-care during the week when you have some free moments and especially on the weekends. It is important to cultivate self-care practices that cultivate self-compassion and allow you to thrive in the important work that you do. Here are some practices that you can prioritize:

1. START BY ACKNOWLEDGING YOUR EFFORTS: As an educator you dedicate countless hours to supporting your students' growth and development. Remember to pause and recognize the effort you put into your work. Acknowledge the positive impact you have on those in your care and give yourself credit for the difference you make.

2. EMBRACE IMPERFECTION AND SELF ACCEPTANCE: Teaching is dynamic and everchanging and it comes with both successes and challenges. Understand that perfection is not the goal; it is progress that matters. Embrace your imperfections as opportunities for growth and learning. Treat yourself with kindness and understanding, as you would your students. Extend the same level of acceptance to yourself. Remember that you are constantly evolving, and that growth takes time.

3. PRIORITIZE REST AND REJUVENATION: Educators often find themselves giving so much of their time and energy, self-care takes a backseat. Make a conscious effort to prioritize rest and rejuvenation, especially on the weekends. It is not selfish to take time for yourself; it is necessary for your well-being. By recharging yourself, you become more effective in the classroom.

4. SET HEALTHY BOUNDARIES: It is crucial to set healthy boundaries to protect your mental and emotional health. Learn to say “NO” when necessary and create space for yourself. Establish a balance between work and personal time, allowing yourself the freedom to recharge and engage in activities that fill your cup. By setting boundaries, you honor your own needs while still making a lasting impact on your students’ lives.

5. PRACTICE SELF-COMPASSIONATE SELF-TALK: Your inner dialogue has a significant impact on your well-being. Practice positive and self-affirming self-talk. Replace self-criticism with words of encouragement and understanding. Treat yourself with the same empathy and compassion that you show others. By cultivating a kind and supportive inner voice, you will build resilience and foster a healthier relationship with yourself.

Remember that YOU MATTER! Your role as an educator is of great importance. However, it is equally important to remember that your well-being matters too. Self-compassion allows you to cultivate a strong foundation for your personal growth and happiness. In 2024, let self-compassion be the guiding light that nurtures your soul and empowers you to continue making a difference in your students’ lives.
