Potter Heads

By James Ferguson, Ashton Legaspi, Sandra Gastelum

Potterheads Club is a club about discussing and experiencing the magical world of Harry Potter. Let's start off with what the club does. This club focuses on reading, making, and breathing Harry Potter's world. They read Harry Potter, of course! In recreating the Harry Potter world, club members have made wands out of "MAGICAL WOOD" (sticks). In order to experience the real world of Harry Potter, they play quidditch. The Potterheads Club meets every Friday after school in Room 403.

The Potterheads Club is currently reading the first book in the series called The Sorcerer's Stone. This book is just one of seven other books in the series. The first book covers only the first year of Harry Potter's adventures at Hogwarts and into eventually defeating the Dark Lord, Voldemort (aka, he who should not be named).

Mr. Lopez

By Sonya Campo, Julisa Abonce Nieto, Nikolas Ortega

Mr. Lopez is a 6th grade teacher and has been teaching here at Fremont for 6 years. He teaches math, science, and technology, but his favorite subjects to teach are math and science because growing up he loved learning these subjects in school. In his free time, he likes basketball and garden as well as watch movies with his family. He likes working with 6th graders because they are more mature than elementary students. He enjoys teaching for the reason to help others make a greater impact. If he could give any advice to any student it would be "to keep on achieving and despite what other people think of you, keep on being who you are, stay true to yourself." Some other quotes that you might hear him say are "Life is simple. Keep it simple or you'll get a pimple." another quote you might hear him say is "Nothing to it, but to do it."

Fremont Tea

By Andrea Munoz and HeavenLee Reyna

Hello Fremont Falcons!!! So, you want that cotton candy cold tea from Walmart, well here it is! Starting off with one cube of sugar is that the dance class officially has turned into a team, wowza. Our second cube is that cheer is back! Sorry to say but the tryouts are over. These are both run by Ms. Hawk! The kettle is screeching now!

If you have a sore throat, here is some honey for that tea. Ms. Moore's drama club is now doing a play! Auditions are now set, and congrats for the main characters! The performance will take place on April 4 and 5 at 6:00 p.m. For MOORE information, ask Ms. Moore in room 806.

For all you out there, who loves love, Valentine's Day is around the corner. Get someone you love, or friends, a nice gift. Maybe even someone special? wink wink Take a chance, you never know. They may think the same way about you. "When you fall for someone's personality everything about them becomes beautiful." -Anonymous

No matter how hard life gets, remember there are people here to help. Examples: The Falcon Center, Ms. Ortiz, even your closest and most trustworthy friends, also people who understand what you're going through, and don't be scared to even talk to your teachers about it.

We will now end this with a couple quotes to raise your spirits up. "Even if life is upside down, change your attitude and turn it around." -Andres Gonzales "The voice in your head may speak loud, but the voice in your heart sings louder." -H.R "Don't change so people will like you. Be yourself and the right people will love the real you." -Anonymous

Don't let others bring you down. Do what you want to do. Wear what you want, when you want. As long as it's the real you. Think your thoughts, speak your mind, or you'll regret it every time.

Congratulations to Fremont Yearbook Cover Contest Winner!

Cute.Chubby Cheeks

By Carolynn Nguyen

According to Newsela, scientists are fighting against a crisis. They have to fight the urge to not squish the chubby cheeks of a seal. This is due to "cute aggression", which is aggressive behavior caused by something cute, such as animals or babies. So, scientists decided to run an experiment to discover why we react this way. They gathered 40 participants and made them wear EEG caps that measures brain activity. The participants were shown pictures of adult animals and then shown pictures of babies and cute animals. The participants all said they wanted to pinch the cheeks of those cute baby animals.

Because of EEG caps, the scientists could measure the participants brain activity. They discovered that the cute photos activated the brain's emotional system and the feelings of pleasure and "wanting". Scientists think that the cute aggression is caused when the brain adds aggression to keep positive feelings from becoming too overpowering. Why is cute aggression important? Let's say you get too caught up with your baby's cuteness and all you want to do is hug them. You would forget that you have to feed your baby and other important things you need to do. But, in the meantime, don't feel bad that you get a weird desire when you see something cute. It's the brain's way of making sure nothing is too cute to handle.

Making Vending Machines on Wheels

By Andrew Huynh

According to Newsela, a school is making a robot that delivers food and drink in California. Now, people will be able to order their snacks and drinks from a bright robot known as the Snackbot. The Snackbot has six wheels, a built in camera, and headlights. It can travel 20 miles in one charge, and the drinks are also cooled. It can even move up hills and in the rain.

Snackbot doesn't charge a delivery fee. Whoever buys drinks or snacks from the Snackbot can choose out of

50 locations where to meet the snackbot to get their food too. Snackbot also sells Smartfood

Delight, Baked Lay's, SunChips, Pure Leaf Tea, Bubly, LIFEWTR, and Starbucks Cold Brew. Note that the Snackbot will only wait for the customer to arrive for 10 minutes before going to the next customer. Customers can also open the Snackbot's lid by using a button in the Snackbot's app.

Disney Ordered To Drop Trademark

"Hakuna Matata"

By Ashton Legaspi

"The Lion King" is a Disney classic with many songs in the movie, but as of recently due to the remake of the movie an online petition urges Disney to drop its trademark of the phrase "Hakuna Matata" a song about having no worries. The Swahili phrase, "hakuna matata" which is what the online petition is about, has garnered about 57,000 signatures as of December 19th. The online petition states that many African countries such as Burundi and Uganda have been using the phrase for a long time. "So Disney can't be allowed to trademark something that it didn't invent" the petition says. The trademark was brought to attention due to the remake of the movie starring Donald Glover, James Earl Jones and Beyoncé Knowles-Carter.

According to Newsela, this isn't the first time the company has received similar criticism before. The movie "Coco," a Disney and Pixar collaboration, that was originally going to be titled "Dia de las Muertos." Disney then applied for a trademark in 2013 but received backlash so they withdrew the application. This was led by Mexican-American cartoonist Lalo Alcaraz with the rest of the Latino community. Pixar then hired Alcaraz as a cultural advisor for "Coco" and stated "It was wrong to attempt to trademark 'Dia de los Muertos' for commerce, and it is wrong to attempt to trademark 'Hakuna Matata,' too."

Japan Remembers Bombing Victims

By Carlos Gomez

Over 500 students at Shiroyama Elementary School in Japan gather in the assembly hall every 9th day of the month to sing a song for fallen victims of the Hiroshima and Nagasaki bombings.

Over seventy years have passed since the bombings killing 1,300 students and 28 staff. Thus, the school feels like they must never forget the victims of the bombings. About 400 schools across Japan visit this site to learn about the students and teachers whose lives were killed without warning "In a brief flash....expiring meaninglessly." 74 year old Setsuo Uchino was just one year and nine months old when the Nagasaki bombings took place.

"Unfortunately I don't think I will see nuclear weapons eradicated when I'm still alive, but I'm hoping that during the next generation's time something will improve" said Uchino. His mother would have reoccurring dreams of the the bombings. She would see burned people on the street begging for water where the scene was like "Hell on Earth". It may be a strong topic to confront to younger children but they must know about the horrors older generations confronted. For the 73rd anniversary of the bombings Japan will invite world leaders to reflect on what happened that fateful day.

Toddler Saved by Bus Driver

By Andrea Muñoz.

According to CNN, a Milwaukee bus driver spotted a toddler walking alone and about to walk into an open intersection. The child was wearing a red onesie and a diaper. "I'm just grateful I was in the right place at the right time," Ivic said at the commendation ceremony held in her honor on Thursday. The woman who saved her is named Irena Ivic. She stopped the bus and ran to the toddler moments before the baby crossed the road. She carried the toddler to the bus as the passengers gathered to help the child. "Oh my God. Oh my God. I am shaking," Ivic said.

A passenger on the bus took off her coat to help the little girl become warm; she was cold to the touch. The temperatures that day was freezing. The poor baby was alone and barefoot. It happened December 22, according to the transit system. Ivic comforted the baby by stroking her hair. The little one fell asleep in her arms. The 19-month-old had been cold and hungry, but was otherwise unharmed, police said. The child went missing after officials believe her mother had a mental breakdown the transit system statement said. "Authorities eventually reunited the baby with its father," This was the ninth time a lost or missing child has been found by a Milwaukee County Transit System driver in recent years. "I absolutely love kids. I used to be a teacher and I have children of my own, so I'm so happy I was able to help this sweet, innocent baby," Ivic said. The baby is now with its father.

Egg Cracks the Internet

By: Jacqueline U., Gelina V., Carolyn N., Andrew H

At 45+ million likes, the egg is now the most liked post on Instagram and the internet. This account is owned by @world_record_egg. It all started when someone decided to post a picture of an egg on January 4th. The previous most liked instagram post was Kylie Jenner's daughter, Stormi Webster, which has 18 million likes. On the egg-citing day, January 13th, the egg broke the world record.

The next day, on January 14th 2019, this egg passed Despacito and claimed the throne to become the most liked thing on the internet. Experts say that this egg-cellent post can make tens of thousands of dollars by selling merch and ads. However, this fame doesn't come without hardships. There are other fake accounts pretending to be the egg account, and still others trying to beat the record. Even Ellen Degeneres joined in on this trend. But, no one can replace this legendary egg.

First Bisexual Woman Senator

By Madisson Power

News spreads fast in the US, and the news about a bisexual democrat joining the senate is no different. A democratic woman named Kyrsten Sinema makes history as the first openly bisexual person sworn into senate.

Not only is she the first bisexual person, she's probably one of the bravest people right now. She's not only cleared a path for others but she's changed so much. Photos and videos show that instead of a Bible being used to swear her into the senate, a Law dictionary was used instead.

Spider-Man Trailer Speculations

By Carlos G., John C., Orion G., and Joshua A.

With the release of last week's Spider-man trailer, Marvel fans are dying to know what will be different this time around. This teaser has sparked many questions like what happened to Tony Stark? Further into the trailer, we are able to see some of Spider-Man's new foes including Hydro-Man and Mysterio. The teaser also revealed new suits such as a stealth and gliding suit.

It is unknown if Stan Lee will appear in the movie, but Marvel most likely pre shot his footage before his death, RIP. It is unclear whether Spider-Man was resurrected after the events of Infinity War, or before. This may be the last appearance of Spider-Man in the Marvel Cinematic Universe due to Sony's 4-film contract with Disney. The fate of Spider-Man is to come in both reality and the Cinematic Universe. This and more will be uncovered in the new Spider-Man swinging into theaters on July 5th.

Jason Momoa's Bodyguards?

By Emma W., Brendan E., and Madisson P.

So there is a picture on the internet right now of Jason Momoa and two bodyguards walking the streets. But, today we are here to see if he really needed them. Jason is 6'4", weighs in at 214 lbs, with a chest size of 48 inches, waist size of 38 inches, and bicep size of 18 inches. The reason he got this big is because of working out, mountain biking, surfing, and rock climbing. The internet calls his bodyguards mini bosses before they have to get to Jason Momoa. With his massive muscles we wonder, "why does he need bodyguards?" Well, he doesn't. Jason Momoa's bodyguards are about 5'7 and 5'11, the height is one factor but you also have to think about weight and muscles. So, answering the real question. Does Jason Momoa actually need the bodyguard to protect him? No, not really, but that doesn't mean he doesn't need them for emotional support, friends.

The Hero of the Year

By Jacqueline Ullrich

Dr. Richado Pun-Chong is a doctor undergoing his medical training in Lima, Peru. He helped sick children in need find housing, meals, and support. He gave this to them for free. He stated that he "couldn't get the picture of the families sleeping on the floor out [his] head." The children he was taking care of had no homes or food to eat. So he decided to donate to them.

He was named one of the top 10 CNN Heroes. He received $100,000 to make these houses and shelters. While accepting the award he stated " I will use this money to build more shelters." He is currently making a new shelter and making people happy. The people he helps are very grateful for his good deeds.

Should Art and Music Classes Be Mandatory?

By: Maiah Callanan

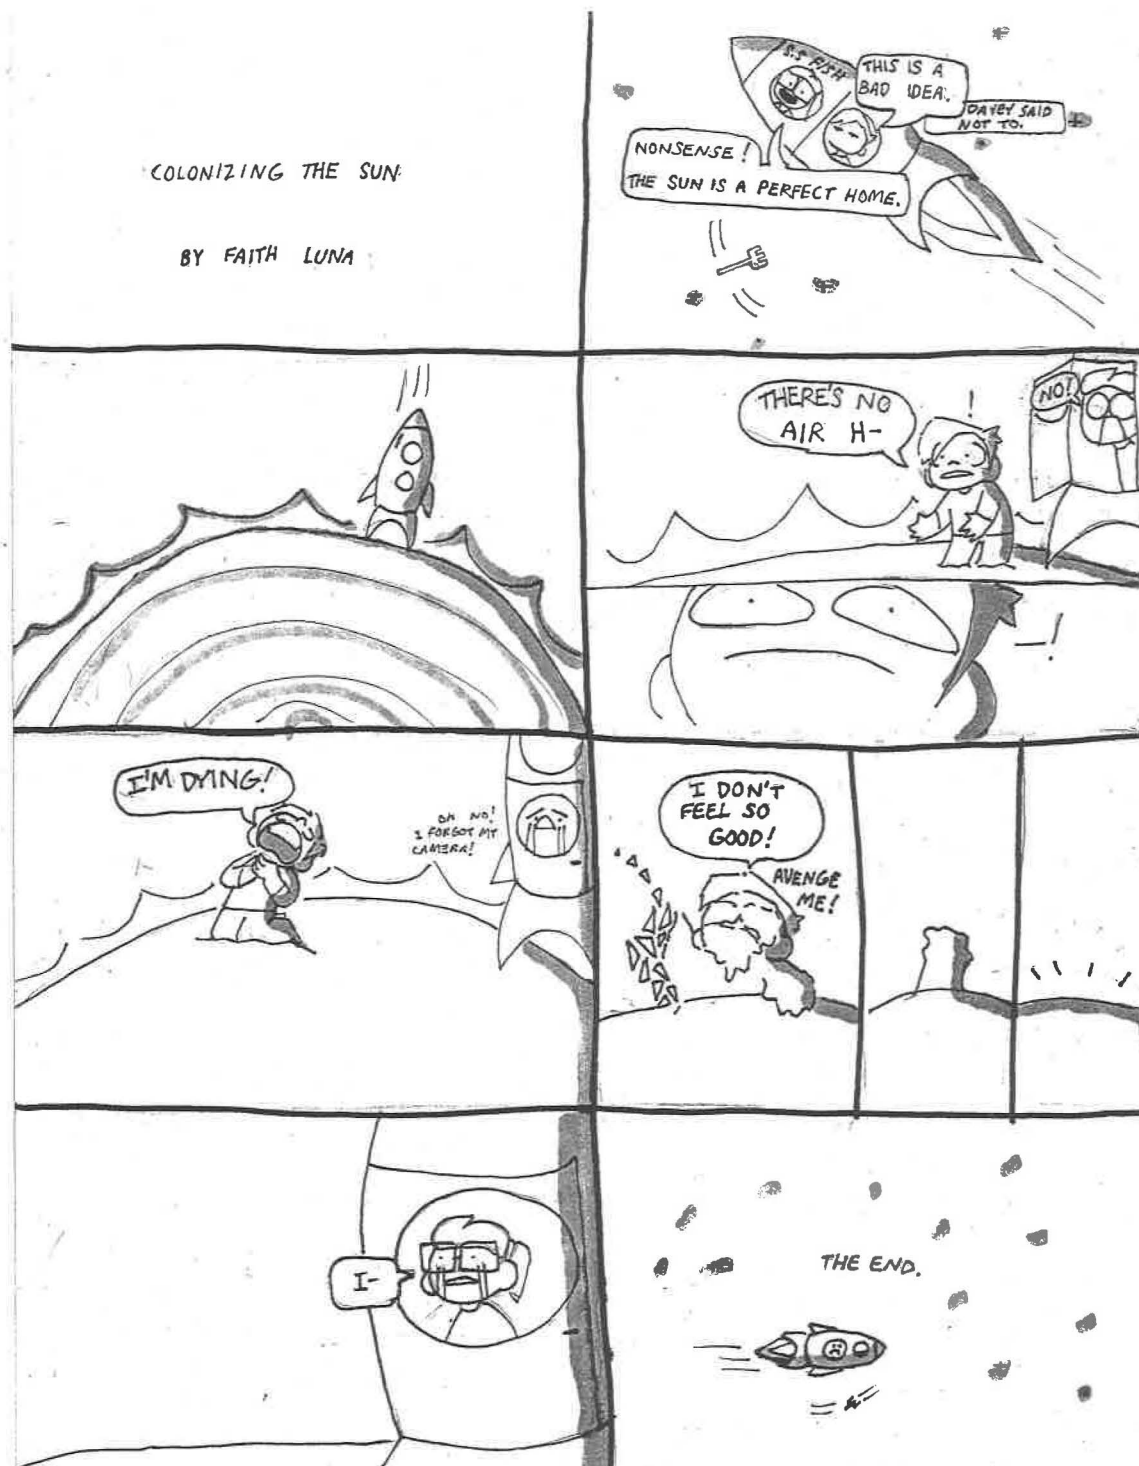

There has been much controversy on whether or not schools should make art and music education a mandatory class in all schools. Art and music have many benefits for students. It lets kids be creative in their own way, not every kid is athletic, it lets kids be themselves. It also gives kids the opportunity to create beautiful things and find out about talents they didn't even know they had. Studies have shown that kids with art and music in their education get higher scores on Math and English standardized tests.

Although, some people think that it should not be mandatory. They say it has no benefit and gets in the way of education. However, it has many benefits. It is proven that it helps kids learn faster and be more focused. Kids should also be able to try something new. Schools usually always have the same electives. Adding things such as drama, band or different types of art classes will give students more of a variety and they won't feel like they're stuck with those few electives for the time they are at that school. Art and music class are an escape for kids who are stressed about normal school work. It's calming and good for putting your mind at ease.
