of the Sayville School District

Listening as SAYVILLE SPEAKS

One could hear a pin drop when SAYVILLE SPEAKS officially began. The audience filling the Middle School auditorium seemed ready to face the facts and understand the real truth about the drug culture invading their lives.

SAYVILLE SPEAKS proved to be a very illuminating and informational evening.

The audience was riveted by the slide presentation of the first keynote speaker, neuroscientist Dr. Stephen Dewey. For 24 years, Dr. Dewey has used PET scans in his research to determine the impact of substance abuse on the brain. Slide after slide showed, without exception, permanent brain malfunctions that caused irreversible addiction, injury, and even death.

The second keynote speaker, Mr. John Venza, vice president of L.I. Outreach Project, was a wealth of knowledge as he discussed maneuvering through the treatment-recovery process, the various options available to parents, and the obstacles many insurance companies use as deterrents when their customers seek financial subsidy.

The last portion of the evening was an invaluable discussion between Sayville High School English teacher Doug Shaw and former Sayville student Adam regarding "the signs everyone missed." With utmost candor, Adam described his early insecurities as a middle school student, and how his unaddressed issues led to alcohol and drug abuse.

The dialogue shouldn't stop here.

Thanks to High School social worker Betsy Quinlan, who spearheaded the program in conjunction with Sayville staff members from Pupil Personnel services, SAYVILLE SPEAKS opened the conversation with a powerful call to action.

Bond Projects Update

Report from the Office of John J. Belmonte
Assistant Superintendent for Business

We are happy to report that, thanks to your past support in passing the Bond Referendum, the construction projects approved by the State Education Department have begun districtwide and are progressing nicely, both on schedule and under budget.

The High School Cafeteria Upgrades are among the designated projects for which work has already begun. After much planning by our District administrators, staff, and architects, these cafeteria improvements will replace the slow, single lunch-lines with a new Food Court setup as well as with the point-of-sale payment system, NutriKids, that is already a success at the Elementary and Middle Schools. A full-time cook will also be on hand to prepare a wide selection of healthy, nutritious meals.

In addition, the outdoor area that opens from the current Cafeteria C will be redesigned as an outdoor eating courtyard, allowing our High School students time to refresh in the sunshine and fresh air during their lunch periods.

A Cafeteria Advisory Committee, comprised of Principal Hoffer, Assistant Superintendent John J. Belmonte, Sayville support staff, as well as select Site-Based Team parents and students, has convened to provide insight and feedback on these improvements.

During the renovation period, the District has arranged for most of the construction to take place after school hours, between 3 - 11 p.m. However, there may be times when construction will take place during the school day. In those instances, the area(s) affected will be entirely closed off to ensure the safety of all.

Delivering a quality food program that aligns with New York State guidelines has always been foremost in our Food and Nutrition program, but once the upgrades are complete, these renovations will provide our High School students with a maximum of efficiency and an enjoyable environment for making healthy choices at lunchtime.

STEEL MAGNOLIAS IN BLOOM BACKSTAGE

The character-driven comedy-drama Steel Magnolias examines six Louisiana women at the crossroads of their lives. In 1987, Steel Magnolias was an off-Broadway production written by Robert Harling, then in 1989, it became a major motion picture with celebrities Sally Field, Dolly Parton, Shirley MacLaine, Daryl Hannah, Olympia Dukakis, and Julia Roberts filling the roles.

In 2010, it was the Sayville Players January Backstage Theatre-in-the-Round production presented by three different, but equally amazing casts. Each night, a new chemistry or dynamic portrayed the poignant interactions of these women whose lives are on the verge of change. In the minimalist yet intimate Backstage Theatre, the heartwarming characters showcased the skills of the seventeen actresses who comprised the parts. Each night, their performances were a quirky mix of dry humor and deep sentiment, that not only held the audiences' attention, but captured their hearts as well.

Bravo to the actresses who blossomed in Steel Magnolias (see list), congratulations also to the three actresses who portrayed Mother and Daughters in the prelude every night, and a special thanks goes to Mr. Steve Hailey (and all who helped in this production) who constantly gives our drama students the opportunity to flower in such a diverse theatre arts program.

BETSY'S PROMISE FULLFILLED

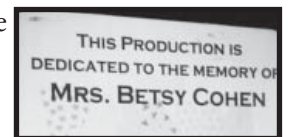

The Middle School's Special Performance of

Pajama Game

The Sayville Middle School premier production of Pajama Game, (the 1954 Tony Winner for Best Musical) delivered rousing musical numbers that blended mature humor (popular in its day) with comedic characterizations. Convincingly acted, impressively danced, and marvelously sung by the talented ensemble of Middle School students, Pajama Game was a delight. Considering it was performed by sixth-, seventh-, and eighth-graders made it even more amazing. [See IN PRAISE OF PAJAMA GAME details next page.]

Behind the scenes, the spirit of Betsy Cohen gave heart to this special Middle School production. Pajama Game was Mr. Norm Cohen's sentimental favorite and Mrs. Cohen had promised him that when she retired it would be her last musical. Honoring her memory and undoubtedly using her spiritual guidance, Director Jeff Hoffman joined forces with colleagues Fred Diekmann, Kristin Woerner, Steve Hailey, and Andrew Giammalvo, and enlisted the supervising expertise of Ken VanEssendelft for construction and Liz Griffith as choreographer to fulfill Betsy's promise.

So many students and parent volunteers backstage who knew and loved Betsy assisted in Pajama Game. Their contributions were evident in the care that went into the impressive and beautifully painted stage sets portraying the factory, office (the name B. Cohen was painted on a factory office door), and the Williams' home; in the backstage assistance that glided enormous sets across the stage in relative order and silence; in the meticulous costuming that ranged in color and style, depicting the Fifties in authentic detail; in the lighting that illuminated the production; in the props that served to root the musical in reality, as well as in the band that gave the musical such depth and feeling.

Betsy Cohen would not only be grateful to everyone who helped her fulfill her promise, she would be proud of the caliber and commitment that made "her" last production absolutely memorable. Now she can move on, content with her legacy.

"We love you, Mama Cohen!"

IN PRAISE OF PAJAMA GAME

*"Hey, there!
You were the stars of the show!
The play didn't make a fool of you,
you were all aglow!"*

While the back story in Pajama Game is about a labor dispute over a seven-and-a-half cents pay raise that puts the Sleep Tite Pajama Factory on the brink of a strike, the musical focuses on one developing romance which crosses over the management-labor line.

Efficiency Expert Vernon Hines (proficiently performed by Liam Hofmeister) sets the fast pace in Racing with the Clock, the visually and musically engaging opening number that introduces the audience to the factory where discontented workers labor under deadlines.

It does not help that bombastic Factory President Old Man Hasler's (Jake Haggart did a great job filling out the role) is stubbornly holding out on the workers' demands. No one but Hasler's secretary, kittenish Gladys Hotchkiss (played purr-fectly by Victoria Nelson), who also happens to be Vernon's girlfriend, holds the secret to the company's finances.

After minor friction erupts between new factory superintendent Sid Sorokin (Theo Ebarb seamlessly personified the dashing hero) and a problem worker, Sid meets with the spitfire Union Grievance Committee Leader Catherine "Babe" Williams (embellished by the memorable Katya Sparwasser). Sid falls head-over-heels for the peppy Babe who proves his equal both adversarially and romantically. Especially sympathetic during his Hey There duet with the Dictaphone, Sid wonders about the futility of his attraction to Babe.

Their sparring love affair is interwoven with other polarized relationships.

Sid's supportive and resourceful secretary, Mabel (Julia Magnani, lovely both in voice and in her rich purple business suit), can't help the ever-jealous Vernon, who attempts to impress Gladys with his carnival knife-throwing talents at a company picnic.

In his song Her Is, comic "character" Prez (played with great panache by Ben Diehl) uses his prestige as head of the union to refine his company-picnic talent for chasing every female employee at the factory, including Gladys, adding fuel to the barbecue fires of discord.

After everyone enjoys their Once a Year Day idyllic picnic with high-kicking dancing, cartwheels, and splits accompanied by energized singing, they return to the daily grind. Sid and Babe admit their love in Small Talk and There Once was a Man, but sparks fly when Babe literally pulls the plug on pajama production in protest.

Even as the plot tangles and unravels their new love, the comic singing and dancing performances in Steam Heat, Think of the Time I Save, and Hernando's Hideaway, propels the story to its happy conclusion: Vernon imagining marriage with Gladys in a silent film of comic indiscretions and Sid learning the secret of Hasler's hidden funds to resolve the pay raise dispute. Once all is well, Sid and Babe, even Vernon and Gladys, are reconciled and the Pajama Factory is back in business.

Congratulations to everyone for a fine performance every night!

Middle School Health Class Discovers

How Music Affects Health & Fitness

Seventh-grade students in Mrs. Jodi Maurici's Health Class spent their semester determining if there were indeed a physical correlation between music and the body, by measuring heart rates.

In part one of their investigations, the students sat in the sedate Middle School Planetarium and listened to different kinds of musical genres. After each selection of music, the students measured and recorded their heart rates. Once they had gathered their information, the students created a graph, answering such questions as: "Which music generated the lowest or highest heart rate? Why do you presume the above to be true? Why do you believe your heart rate responded the way it did to the various selections?"

During part two of the project, the students used an online metronome to determine Beats Per Minute and created a "playlist" for a personal workout. Utilizing techniques learned in Mrs. Maurici's class, they completed the project by creating a video workout complemented with a playlist that would allow for the fluctuations of their heart rate at various sections of the workout.

Upon ending the successful project, the students were particularly amazed by the results and look forward to channeling both their music and fitness for a healthy future.

Making a Great Middle School READING Tradition

GREATER

Sayville Middle School reading students in Mrs. Rafferty's class have kept a heartwarming tradition of reading in public for a very special audience—the residents of Le Petite Fleur Nursing Home. This year, Mrs. Rafferty, along with Mrs. Galima livened up the reading tradition in several ways. In addition to the student reading presentations (see full story and list Highlights Online), musical selections by three talented students were added to the program, and Mrs. Galima brought eighteen handmade blankets, crafted by the students in her Knitting and Crochet lunch club.

The reading students read their selections with fluency and eloquence to an audience of 40 residents. "Their pacing was superb!" Mrs. Rafferty beamed with pride, "and their voices carried throughout the large room. This was a pleasant experience for everyone." When the talented Kayla S. performed a beautiful rendition of Side by Side, some residents sang or tapped along from their wheelchairs. On keyboard, student Dalen Ferreira played Mozart's Sonata in C Major that was impressive to hear, while Christine Guinessey showcased her NYSSMA song selection.

Finally, the students presented the residents with the blankets, made "with love in each stitch" especially for them. "As many of the residents knew how to knit and crochet, it was nice to see," Mrs. Galima said, "how it opened up the conversations. The students enjoyed chatting with the residents." Mrs. Galima also thanked the residents and the caregivers "for allowing us to visit and help our children learn how important it is to always care about others."

Seeing the students show empathy and understanding for the elderly during the visit, she declared, "our visit was a true success!"

BEE ACCOMPLISHED

Congratulations to Seventh-grader Shreeya P. for claiming the title of Sayville Middle School Building Winner for the LI Scripps Spelling Bee.

Organized by Middle School Librarian Mrs. Rooney, this year's spelling bee was an intense and challenging competition between Shreeya and runner-up, Eighth-grader Jennifer.

After a 40-minute challenge in the library, the classroom winners were narrowed down to Shreeya and Jennifer, with the word "aggrandizement" deciding the win.

Mrs. Rooney commended all the participants, who should be proud of their accomplishments, for a wonderful job!

Bee Winner Shreeya P. and Runner-up Jennifer L.

GOING FOR THE GOLD with PARP

While the music Chariots of Fire played, three Sayville High School scholar-athletes, bearing Olympic "torches," ran into the Cherry Avenue Elementary gym to a cheering crowd.

Certainly, it was an exciting way to introduce the upcoming 2010 Winter Olympics and just as stimulating as a kickoff event for Cherry Avenue's Parents for Reading Partners program. "The students were encouraged to wear red, white, and blue or a team shirt," explained Mrs. Geraldine Batterberry who was involved in organizing the event. "Our Kindergarteners wore American flags, First-graders held Olympic torches, Second-graders held the Olympic Rings, while the Third-, Fourth- and Fifth graders (our building leaders, of course) wore bronze, silver, and gold medals, respectively!"

Once the athletes entered and "lit" the Olympic Flame (created out of paper by art teacher Jennifer Berotti), the High School students Dan Mellynychuk, Ashley Agniti, and Arielle Theofield spoke about the value of sports and academics and encouraged the students to Go for the Gold by reading the most books during PARP.

The ceremony concluded with the Cherry Avenue student government providing background on the upcoming Olympics and explaining the Olympic symbols showcased by each grade level.

CHERRY AVENUE 2010 National Geographic Geography Bee

BUSY BEES COMPETE OVER GEOGRAPHY

"Can you name the state that borders eight other states?"
Students at Lincoln Avenue can!

When the annual National Geographic Geography Bee was held at Lincoln for fourth and fifth graders, fourteen finalists, two from each classroom, competed in a rigorous seven-round competition. Fourth-grader Richard C. in Ms. Palmarozzo's class came out on top, correctly answering each and every question he faced. Joshua M. and Gena M. were close runners-up and are to be commended for their fine achievement! Congratulations to Richard, Joshua, and Gena!

Runners-up Fifth-graders Joshua M. and Gena M. with their certificates flank Medal Winner Fourth-grader Richard C.

DRIVEN FOR COATS

Organizing the annual Coat Drive for a second year, Physical Ed. teacher Reade Sands, social worker Kerri O'Rourke, and the Student Council at Cherry Avenue joined forces with Sunrise Drive's Student Council and social worker Toni Fabian. Not to leave Lincoln out of the donation process, Lincoln Avenue social worker Laurie Carluccio took some time from Lincoln's Student Government Marine Corps Drive to help gather coats from their building.

The Coat Drive, initiated to help the students of the Brentwood Elementary Schools, was coordinated with Mr. Sands' wife, Kerry Sands, who is a School Counselor at North East Elementary. With the generous support of our principals, social workers, student councils and school communities, Mr. Read was able to collect and Mrs. Read was able to distribute hundreds of coats to the Brentwood students.
