"Don't miss the night everyone talks about..."
JAZZ NIGHT
Wednesday, April 22, 7:30 PM
Sayville High School

The Manhattan Jazz scene comes to Sayville for this year's Jazz Night, featuring the Sayville High School Jazz Choir and Jazz Ensemble performing with two jazz giants, vocalist Jackie Presti and Dominic Farinacci, a world class trumpet player.

- Ms. Presti has sung and conducted choirs for over 30 major motion pictures, in addition to her television and On and Off Broadway performances.

- Mr. Farinacci, considered one of the most gifted jazz musicians under the age of 30, is a graduate of Juilliard, was discovered by Wynton Marsalis, and has performed and recorded with many high-profile jazz artists in the U.S. and abroad.

JAZZ NIGHT Tickets (suggested donation is $10 adults, $5 students/seniors) will be available at the door or in advance by calling 631-244-6634.

Every year, March is designated as Music in our Schools Month. Among the many diverse and ongoing musical accomplishments of our Sayville students and staff, the following items deserve special mention:

- Sayville Senior Drew Hartman was selected for the All-County High School Jazz Ensemble as the only drum set player.
- Sayville Junior Tess Buono was selected for the Suffolk All-County High School Jazz Choir.
- Three outstanding Sayville Music Teachers—the most from any one school district on Long Island—had been selected by Nassau County as previous Guest Conductors:
 - High School Chorus Teacher Jeff Hoffman—Division I
 - High School Band Director Peter DeSalvo—Division I
 - Middle School Chorus Teacher Betsy Cohan—Division III (Grades 7-8)
 - Sayville Seniors Greg Jones and Thomas Mittiga performed at MENC All-Eastern Honors Ensembles in Providence, Rhode Island.
- Doug Jones participated in the Music Lovers Scholarship solo competition and placed third, winning a $1,500 scholarship.
- Sayville School District opened the doors of the Middle School for the SMBA (Sayville Music Boosters for the Arts) sponsored SAYVILLE MUSIC IDOL fundraising contest (hosted by Gene Henriksen in cooperation with Music Idol Entertainment, www.musicidol.org, whose sponsors include WBLI and Cactus Hair Salon) that encouraged so many Middle School and High School students to take center stage and perform pop tunes.

During the Music Idol semifinals held on March 5th, the ten high school finalists and the ten Middle School finalists were:

HIGH SCHOOL

- SHANNON CANTER
- RAFFAELA CAPP
- KASEY GOLKA
- BRIANNA GOMEZ
- MOLLY McCAULEY
- JESSICA PELUSO
- CATHY RICO
- LYNDESE ROMARD
- JACKIE ROUTH
- HARRISON SCHENKEL

MIDDLE SCHOOL

- Marissa Casazza
- Anna Corso
- Tim Costorf
- Jake Haggart
- John Haggart
- Shannon Hickey
- Liam Hofmeister
- Libby Larkin
- Kayla Stockert
- Jake Vail.

At the Finals (held on April 3rd) one High School student and one Middle School student were selected as Sayville Music Idols. (See website for updates.)

- SMBA also held its annual AFTERNOON IN CELEBRATION OF THE ARTS showcase with the remarkable performing talents of Sayville Seniors Thomas Mittiga, Christina Natoli, Melissa La Pinta, Jared Linehan, Roxy York, and Kristina Schroeter. In addition, student teacher Jonah Piali and Sayville Alumna/music teacher Kerri VanBoxel performed. Our professionals/teachers who enhanced the afternoon with their amazing performances were Jeff Hoffman, Dr. Jen Morgo, and Amy McGrath.

A Close-Knit Group

This year's Crafted With Love Knit/Crochet Club at the Middle School, moderated (and taught) by Mrs. Jean Galima, has been generating a lot of love—in the form of blankets, premie hats, and chemo hats donations—for local hospitals and organizations such as the Life Center of Long Island.

While her knitting club has been around for years, Mrs. Galima continued the tradition and welcomed a new batch of Sixth-graders to the “very caring” fold to learn knitting and crocheting.

“All our members have been such outstanding craftspeople!” Mrs. Galima says with enthusiasm. “Members from the Seventh- and Eighth-grades have been contributing throughout the year. Esra Erdogan made beautiful items during the summer, Chelsea Nadler and Isha Khawaja are also very dedicated contributors who have made so very many beautiful granny square blankets and hats, and Janine Loesch (Eighth-grade) still amazes us all with the amount of beautiful hats she has donated to hospitals.”

The Crafted With Love Club and Mrs. Galima also want to express their gratitude to “those who have donated yarn, as well as the PTA for their grant which has allowed us to purchase the best yarns and needles.”

CELEBRATING LOTE at the Middle School

Sayville Middle School students weren't just “hearing things” when the morning PA played foreign music, followed by announcements in Spanish. They may have been momentarily puzzled, but soon everyone remembered it was LOTE (LANGUAGES OTHER THAN ENGLISH) Week.

The Middle School Language teachers, Mrs. Cox, Mrs. DeSiano, Mrs. Calarreta, Mrs. Martin, and Mrs. Reith, carefully planned the weeklong LOTE celebration so their students wouldn't forget. Throughout the week, Sixth-grade students created thoughtful poster designs on language studies; the Middle School library window encouraged multicultural reading; a daily multilingual question-and-answer contest allowed students to research the question, submit the answer, and be picked for a prize, and at the end of each day, closing announcements were conducted in French.

Special guest Fabriana (right, above photo), a seventeen-year-old exchange student from Bolivia, visited Sayville Middle School midweek to share her cultural background. During her PowerPoint presentation, she explained the colors of her flag, described her school and family customs (ex., all family members are invited to attend their Senior Proms, it is not a boyfriend/girlfriend event), and showed slides of the natural wonders of her country. Fabriana concluded with a demonstration of how to make Papaya-banana smoothies that proved to be refreshing in any language.

During the remainder of the week, the older students attended classes that were conducted entirely in the language, and also viewed Finding Nemo in either a Spanish or French version. On Fiesta Friday, everyone enjoyed a class of international cuisine and realized that food always speaks a universal language—mmmmmm!

National Art Honor Society Springs Into Action with Flower Pot Painting

Using colorful acrylic paints for a recreational activity at Sunrise Village, sixteen members of the National Art Honor Society taught “Flower Pot Painting” to twenty-three “artists in waiting.” As the clay pots were transformed with designs that ranged from bunny rabbits to American flags, the enthusiastic students transferred their energy to the residents who gave in to their inner child and thoroughly enjoyed the activity. Sayville NAHS Art Advisor, Mrs. Kim Kamensky, and Sunrise Village activities director, Patricia Neu, who assisted Mrs. Kamensky in arranging this event, agreed, “It's hard to tell who had the better time, the kids or the residents of Sunrise Village.”

The NAHS members attending this event were:

Ela Erdogan
Jenna Ferremi
Melissa Furci
Lauren Hammerle
Patricia Hanlon

A BEAST OF AN UNDERTAKING

A Beauty to Behold

In true Sayville High School tradition, the Tony-Award winning musical production of Disney's Beauty and the Beast was double-cast—two sets of beasts, beauties, principles, and players—that bestowed a double dose of magic over four spectacular nights.

Capturing the enchantment of this ambitious “Broadway production” on the Sayville High School stage was no easy task. If demanding score, intricate costumes, elaborate and enormous sets were not enough challenge, add to the mix the necessity of two casts ACTING across the emotional spectrum of levity and gravity—all the elements that made the Broadway show such a success—and one may be as daunted as the befuddled Maurice as he enters the Beast’s dark Castle.

Wonders of it all, it worked—uniquely! Given the timeframe of rehearsals and the youthfulness of the company members, each of the Sayville performances was strongly cast and successfully delivered the power and beauty of the same story. Each night the classic tale was told with distinguishing vigor and distinctive chemistry, compelling audiences to standing ovations—especially Friday and Saturday nights, when performances were sold out.

Sayville High school’s tradition of double casting—and this is rare among high schools—has always meant double the work for the Producer and directors, but it has doubled the opportunity for many more of our students to grow, not just theatrically, but in their ability for public speaking. Special thanks go to Mr. Steve Hailey, who has for 30 years cast a wider net and pulled in the talent from an apparently prolific pool of Sayville students.

The overall success of this undertaking relied upon so many shoulders. Additional thanks and congratulations go to everyone whose orchestra-pit or backstage talents contributed to this Music and Theatre Departments’ production, including but not limited to, Musical Director Fred Diekman, Orchestra Conductor Peter DeSalvo and his student musicians, Sound Supervisor Andy Giammalvo and his crew, Technical Supervisor Ken Van Essendelft along with Senior Crew Chief Keith Johnson, Dan Anderson and crew (assisted by Joe Cook, Michael Kennedy, Chris LoPreto, Glen Poli, and Fred Schreiber) who constructed the foreboding castle interior, along with scenery artist supervisor Taylor Takats, Choreographers Patricia Hough and Alena Yost, Lighting Manager Gary Leigh-Manuell with assistant Daniel Koehler, and the variety of Costume and Makeup supervision by the Sayville Players, assisted by Mrs. Donna Hailey.

In the end, Beauty transformed the savage Beast who “wins the world’s forgiveness,”... Belle and the Prince find home, where they should be forever,” and the audience sighed, satisfied. Twas a beautiful thing, indeed!

WHO COULDN'T LOVE THIS BEAUTY & THE BEAST?

- (l-r) Lumiere was played with perfect flare by the flawless Kenneth Murray and was quite debonair with Harrison Schenkel;

- (l-r) Cogsworth was funny and fastidious in Michael Miller's capable portrayal and a well-timed wit in Alexandra Moncayo's;

- (l-r) Mrs. Potts delivered her soothing outlook flavored by Amanda Rizzo's rich tones and Cassandra Golka's refreshing lilt;

- (l-r) Both Chips (adorable Mary McCauley and delightful Deanna Lumley) were "Equal" in satisfying our "Splenda" sweet tooth;

- (l-r) Madame de la Grand Bouche was hilariously over-the-top with Lexi Minogue's dazzling coloratura, yet hysterically embellished by Steffi Dier's characterization

- (l-r) Babette couldn't have been more flirtatious with Casey Jarvis, nor more irresistible with Mary Corrado

Gaston's silly girls (Tessa Buono, Angharad Rebholz, Rachel Klahn, Kristina Schroeter, Meredith Yusko, Tara Kennedy) were perfectly entertaining.

CHERRY AVENUE WALTZING IN CHARACTER

WITH MISS ANDERSON'S SECOND GRADE

Miss Jeanette Anderson could attest that her Second-grade students in Cherry Avenue are real characters, or at least they appeared in character for a special class activity.

As part of the Language Arts curriculum on researching, writing, and public speaking, the students were required to choose a character to study.

After, Miss Anderson scheduled an additional feature—a Storybook Character Fairy Tale Ball, with invitations to the parents—at which the students would dress as their characters and showcase all they had learned.

With the help of Music teacher Mrs. Kristi Woerner, the students practiced waltzing for over a week, in time for the fancy Fairy Tale Ball.

The Ball was a splendid afternoon! Each student, masquerading in character, read aloud the descriptions and comparisons they had researched, then the music began. As the cast of Storybook Characters bowed and waltzed, guided by Mrs. Woerner, to the music provided by accompanist student teacher Mr. Lentz on the piano, the invited guests were entirely charmed. Sighs of ooohs and aahs were followed by genteel applause.

Storybook Characters included Harry Potter, Olivia, Little Red Riding Hood, Henry and Mudge, Sirega Nona, Cowgirl Kate, Amelia Bedelia, Jack from the Magic Treehouse Series, Fancy Nancy, and Miss Daisy from Miss Daisy is Crazy.

To cap the event, each character presented a flower to his or her special guest, bowed, and asked, "May I have this dance?" The whole affair ended as parents waltzed with a distinctive character on a lovely and cultured afternoon.

Return of the Stars IT'S OSCAR TIME

It was a star-studded event that included a red-carpet walk, a grand entrance, and fashion statements that had the critics buzzing. The Second Annual Oscar Celebration at Cherry Avenue opened with an award-winning song and dance number, directed by Music teacher Kristi Woerner and performed by the "nominees"—all the Third-graders in Mrs. Batterberry's, Mrs. Falco's, and Mrs. Fulton's classes.

Disguising the New York State learning standards for public speaking in a self-esteem promotional program, the ceremony was fun and rewarding for everyone! An honorary award for Assistant Superintendent for Instruction Dr. Geraldine Sullivan Keck, was a big hit that had both the audience of parents and the Oscar winners laughing.

Snowman Building: A LESSON IN INVENTION

Not all snow is created equal. This is what Mrs. Metzler's First-grade students at Cherry Avenue discovered when they came to school prepared for an engineering lesson on how to build a snowman. Each group of students was expected to work cooperatively with an assortment of boots, scarves, hats, and gloves and to experiment with different construction methods. Some groups tried rolling snowballs; others tried chopping chunks of snow. Only the dry snow was not cooperating—a science lesson for another day. Assisted by Mr. Rich Ortiz from district maintenance and his plow, the students revamped their plans and created a "Snow Blob" out of the plowed pile. Back in the classroom, warmed by hot chocolate and cookies, the students created a "published" book that outlined the sequence of events and the unexpected but ingenious outcome of their activity.

Following the Flow of THE KIDSWIM WATER SAFETY INITIATIVE

Cherry, Lincoln, and Sunrise Kindergarteners Learned Pool Safety at School Assemblies

Sayville Kindergarten students couldn't stop giggling at Gus and Goldie (photo right). The live puppet show, which opened the KidSwim Long Island Water Safety presentation at each elementary school, starred two entertaining fish who demonstrated pool safety rules.

the audience quickly took up the lyrics and were singing the safety song with enthusiasm even before the video ended.

As a memento of their visit, KidSwim Long Island representatives distributed a packet to each child that contained a copy of the Stewie book and CD, as well as a coloring book.

When Gus appears poolside wearing earphones and drinking from a glass soda bottle, Goldie warns him of such dangers. During the show, Gus and Goldie help each other by discussing other safety tips, such as keeping the pool gate closed, having responsible adults present while swimming, not diving in shallow areas, and keeping a phone nearby to call in case of an emergency. When asked, "What number do you call in an emergency?," all the Sayville Kindergarten students shouted the correct answer in unison, "911!"

The children could be heard leaving the presentation singing... don't jump in 'til you learn to swim... cover your chest with a safe life vest...—the very results for which KidSwim Long Island was hoping.

The puppet show was followed by a video of Stewie the Duck Learns to Swim, based upon a book that reinforced Gus and Goldie's lessons. The story of how a young duck learns proper behavior around a pool includes an irresistible song (to the tune of Twinkle, Twinkle Little Star) that lists the most important pool safety rules. The children in Sunrise Drive Kindergarten students enjoyed Stewie the Duck's lessons on pool safety.

Sponsored by Long Island Pool & Spa Association, Inc., KidSwim Long Island is an elementary educational program to advise children and the parents about water safety. It is a proactive response, by the companies that do their best to install pools with all the safety mechanisms in place, to end childhood drownings in pools. Educating pool users on how to maximize those safeties is what KidSwim Long Island hopes to accomplish by reaching out to children and their parents.

For information about KidSwim Long Island, contact Kyle Chaikin, Long Island Pool & Spa Association, Inc., 293-9064.

March was also designated YOUTH ART MONTH.

Congratulations to the following Elementary student artists who had their artworks on display at the Bay Area Friends of the Fine Arts Gallery at the Gillette House:
