

change

Ever since the first ship was brought over they have never been equal.
Humans selling humans. Families ripped apart. Let's listen to their sequel.
 America is still constantly oppressing.
 It's completely and utterly depressing.
 Even after the 13th amendment
 They never truly got their rights back
 So let us fight back.
 But no that's not how it works, silly me,
 I forgot, about the racist jerks
 Every night on the news we hear victims of murder
 "I can't breathe" he said, but after that it was over.
 How many have to die before the words get out
 Breonna Taylor, Stephon Clark, Michael Brown. Lets shout.
 But no, not too loud, we'll make the racists mad.
 Who am I kidding, stuff them, we are allowed to be bad.
 We demand change.
 How dare we treat others differently.
 Just because their complexion is darker.
 That's extremely uneasy.
 How do we change?, one may ask
 Listen here it's quite simple, all you need is a heart.
 Number 1: Be conscious of what you say not all may interpret the same way
 Number 2: Stand up for what is right, don't be shy, put up a good fight.
 Number 3: Protest with all your might nothing will change without a good insight.
 And Number 4: Educate, educate yourself and others.
 Be woke because that's what's truly gonna to provoke
A new world, one where we are all equal. And that, that should be the sequel.
