The Special Education Advisory Council (SEAC) is hosting its final meeting of the 2023-2024 school year, providing a unique opportunity for community members to engage with high school and post-high school transition students. These students will share their personal experiences with Individualized Education Programs (IEPs), discussing the impact these plans have had on their educational journey. Attendees will gain insight into the challenges and successes encountered by students with IEPs, and the students will offer their advice to peers navigating similar paths. This meeting is not only a chance to learn from these students' perspectives but also a way to support and celebrate their achievements.
