HONORS U.S. HISTORY II: Course Description

The purpose of this required course is to stress the major events in our country's history beginning with the Post-Civil War Period and continuing through America's emergence as a world power in the Twentieth Century. Major units studied include: Imperialism, The Progressive Movement, The World Wars, The Period of Economic Crisis, The Vietnam Era, Conservative Revolution, and Contemporary America. Mixed throughout the course are opportunities for the student to learn more about the history of New Jersey, Black History, and the contributions of women, careers, values and current events.

The objectives of the honors program in Social Studies focus on the analysis, synthesis, and evaluation of historical data. Students are expected to maintain a high level of academic interest, demonstrate a sophisticated level of critical thinking, and be self-motivated learners and generators of scholarly material. Honors students must additionally demonstrate their ability to be effective writers, in order to enhance communication and shared knowledge within the classroom.

Student Outcomes:

Helping students develop and effectively use a wide variety of skills is a central purpose of social studies. These skills are central to one's learning throughout life. A command of these tools will be of assistance to students in understanding their society and in becoming productive members of the American community.

Students will be able to:

- Determine the credibility and value of information, while also considering context, point of view, and multiple perspectives
- Collaboratively evaluate possible solutions to problems and conflicts that arise in an interconnected world
- Critically analyze information, make ethical judgements, and responsibly address controversial issues
- Communicate through rational and persuasively written and oral arguments to present issues to controversial issues
- Make informed and reasoned decisions and accept responsibility for the consequences of their actions and/or inactions
- Take actions that result in a more equitable society
- Analyze sources of prejudice and discrimination and propose solutions to eliminate them
- Based on analysis and evaluation of historical evidence, make supportable inferences and draw appropriate conclusions
- Evaluate evidence from primary and secondary sources
- Compare and contrast points of view from multiple authors or sources
- Recognize cause and effect
- Develop and practice debating skills
- Analyze differences in historical interpretation
- Continue to develop research skills through the use of electronic sources, such as scholarly articles from online databases
- Analyze commonly accepted historical arguments and explain how an argument has been constructed from historical evidence
- Prepare in a timed period, a valid essay based on a set of given documents
- Analyze and evaluate historical patterns of continuity and change over time
- Identify, analyze and synthesize information on maps, globes, photos, timelines, etc.
- Understand and explain geographic settings of historical and current events
- Evaluate the influence of geography upon history and culture
- Analyze cartoons as a means of expressing viewpoints

- Identify and understand what constitutes differences and duration of various historical period

Interdisciplinary Connections

Teachers will combine, integrate and infuse disciplines as needed. ELA reading, writing, speaking and listening assignments are infused throughout the curriculum to develop basic reading and comprehension skills. Other suggestions for interdisciplinary connections:

- Career Transition
- Mathematics and Business can be combined with economic units
- Science can be combined with discussion of climate change
- Art, music and literature will be called upon to supplement what is learned in history and develop cross curricular development
- The teacher will work with the library media specialist on various research units

Accommodations and Modifications: Each unit has examples of possible accommodations/modifications. Charts of accommodations/ modifications are found at the end of the document.

Amistad/Holocaust/LGBTQ+/Climate Change/AAPI/DEI Connections

Amistad Connection:

In Unit 1, The Emergence of Modern America, students will learn about the discrimination of African Americans in the workplace and in organized labor, as well as their contributions to the Industrial Revolution. They will study the opposing philosophies of Booker T. Washington and W.E.B. DuBois. In Unit 2, World War I, students will learn about the segregation of the U.S. military and the contributions of black soldiers, despite that segregation. They will learn about the Great Migration, as well. In Unit 3, The Roaring 20s, students will learn about the Harlem Renaissance and the contributions to American culture by African Americans. In Unit 4, The Great Depression, students will learn about the impact of the depression on African Americans, FDR's "black cabinet" and the mass exodus of black voters to the Democratic Party. In Unit 5, World War II, students will learn about the contributions of African American soldiers, their experience, and how it paved the way for the Civil Rights Movement. In Unit 6, the Cold War, students will learn about the effects of anticommunist sentiment on the African American community. In Unit 7, Civil Rights and Social Change, students will learn about the experience of individual African Americans and the community throughout the Civil Rights Movement.

Holocaust Connections:

In Unit 1, The Emergence of Modern America, students will learn about the discrimination Jewish immigrants faced in the United States. In Unit 3, The Roaring 20s, students will learn about the discrimination Jewish Americans faced during the 1920s. In Unit 5, World War II, students will learn about the horrors of the Holocaust and the American response to Jewish refugees citing rising anti-Semitism in the State Department and the ultimate creation of the War Refugees Board.

LGBT/Disabilities:

Curriculum shall include instruction on the political, economic, and social contributions of persons with disabilities and lesbian, gay, bisexual, and transgender people, in an appropriate place as part of the district's implementation of the New Jersey Student Learning Standards. The contributions of people whom we may now identify as LGBTQ+ and persons with disabilities are integral and central to how we conceptualize our national history. The course will pick up with the reform movements of the 19th century that attempted to continue persecution of people in the lgbtq+ communities. The industrialization of the nation led to movement to cities and different groups began creating their own spaces in these cities. However, the eugenics movement and sterilization produced a model that would limit the lives of LGBTQ+ and persons with disabilities and rendered them medically inferior, legally unequal, morally suspect, socially outcast, with no right to reproduce. There was a new sexual freedom of the 1920s which marked a significant LGBTQ+ nightlife that flourished in American cities. Some highlighted stories in US II could include the activism of Jane Addams and her partner Mary Rozet Smith, Harry Hay and the founding of the Mattachine Society, George Takei and the Internment Camp experience, Marsha P. Johnson and the early Gay Liberation Movement/Stonewall Riots, the political election of Harvey Milk, James Baldwin as an activist and writer, and Billie Jean King as a leader in athletics, among others. The course will document activism within the LGBTQ+ movement citing an end to sodomy laws, the rise and fall of the Don't Ask Don't Tell policy in the military, and the ultimate Obergefell v. Hodges Supreme Court decision that legalized gay marriage. Pertaining to connecting the course with peoples of disabilities, USII will cite the contributions of individuals including with learning disabilities like Thomas Edison and Walt Disney, and individuals with physical disabilities like Helen Keller and Franklin Roosevelt. The course will also look at the response to people with disabilities including the eugenics movement (Buck vs. Bell court case) and the American with Disabilities Act (1990).

Climate Change:

The climate change connection in US II will explore the environmental impacts of the mechanization of agriculture, the conservation movement, the environmental movement that was catalyzed in the 1970s, and global warming in the 20th century. The course begins through an examination of the degradation of much of the American landscape through aggressive industrial revolution that sought to extract materials at an expedited pace from the land. The course will look at the impact of decades of mechanized agriculture with the advent of the conservation movement in the early 20th century and the environmental impact on land destruction with the 1930s Dust Bowl. New Deal policies learned about will examine the growth of programs like the TVA and the CCC, both which sought to address the American landscape, transform irrigation in flooded areas, and conserve land. In a heightened era of awareness of environmental issues, the course will look at the causes and effects of the creation of such legislation as the Environmental Protection Act and the Endangered Species Act. Finally, in the modern day, students will look at the government's response to global warming and how rising temperatures have altered landscapes, impacted communities, and altered immigration patterns.

Asian Americans & Pacific Islanders:

The AAPI experience in the United States extends into the 20th century. The story of AAPI individuals is interwoven into the broader history of the United States and can be further seen in the story of immigrants to the United States. The immigrant experience of Asian Americans and Pacific Islanders contributed greatly to the diversity of American culture; however, there are many instances of racial discrimination against these people, leading to political and social segregation. The curriculum incorporates laws passed to oppose AAPI people throughout the 20th century, looking at the 1920s quota system, Japanese Internment Camps and a later reversal of immigration restrictions with the Immigration Act of 1965. The Civil Rights unit will look at progressive reform movements that sought to benefit Asian Americans, such as the farm working initiatives of AWOC in California in the 1960s. The curriculum includes the history and contributions of Asian Americans and Pacific Islanders on the state and national levels. AAPI includes individuals who immigrated to the United States and who have impacted the country's politics, demography, economy, and culture. The contributions of people who identify as AAPI are central to how we conceptualize our national history.

Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion (DEI):

Diversity is the presence of differences that may include race, gender, religion, sexual orientation, ethnicity, nationality, socioeconomic status, language, (dis)ability, age, religious commitment, and/or political perspective. Populations that have been, and remain, underrepresented among practitioners in the field and marginalized in the broader society. For example: Unit I - women and Chinese immigrants, Unit II - black soldiers in America, and Unit IV - Dust Bowl migrants. Equity is promoting justice, impartiality and fairness within the procedures, processes, and distribution of resources by institutions or systems. Inclusion is an outcome to ensure those that are diverse actually feel and/or are welcomed. To that end, this can be achieved through consideration of diverse histories, experiences and perspectives that promote the dignity and respect of all individuals. This can be seen through the lenses of the Amistad Connection, Holocaust Connections,

LGBT/Disabilities, and AAPI, as well as other underrepresented groups in our nation's history. These resources and experiences are listed throughout this curriculum.

6.1 U.S. History: America in the World. All students will acquire the knowledge and skills to think analytically about how past and present interactions of people, cultures, and the environment shape the American heritage. Such knowledge and skills enable students to make informed decisions that reflect fundamental rights and core democratic values as productive citizens in local, national, and global communities.

APPENDIX A

Integrated Research Unit:

Summary

In order to ensure that a variety of research skills are embedded into our curriculum, we have created an Integrated Research Unit for each semester of each US History class (4 total). The content of this unit is flexible as is the product (i.e., PowerPoint presentation, video, etc.) The skills are what will remain constant in an effort to develop them throughout a student's experience as a history student at MHS.

The required skills are as follows:

1. Gathering source information – Students will be able to identify valid, reliable, and relevant sources. This includes Internet sites, reference books, non-reference books, newspaper articles, and other print sources.
2. Citations – Students will be able to properly cite information in a Works Cited/Bibliography as well as in-text citations when applicable.
3. Analysis and Synthesis of Research – Students will be able to analyze sources in a constructive way. They will be able to identify important information, relate that information to their research topic, and synthesize information to complete their product.
4. Written expression – Students will be able to create a written component of their research. The written component can be in the form of an essay (persuasive, informative, etc.), a formal research paper, a speech, etc. The emphasis is on the student's ability to form a comprehensive, organized, and detailed product related to their research that is entirely of their own efforts; time should be provided to discuss plagiarism and how to avoid it.
5. Visual/Oral expression – Students will be able to present their research using visual and public-speaking skills. Students will create a presentation for the class based on their findings. It is suggested that this component emphasize technology.
6. Technology – Students will be able to utilize various types of technology, such as PowerPoint, video-streaming, etc. as a part of the research process. Technology is infused throughout the unit in the form of both research methods as well as student products.
7. Personal Financial Literacy- Students will be able to demonstrate personal and civic financial literacy. Students will be able to apply financial knowledge and skills when making ethical consumer and financial decisions.

SOCIAL STUDIES SKILLS TABLE
Essential Question: What are effective strategies for accessing various sources of information and historical evidence, determining their validity, and using them to solve a problem or find a solution to a public policy question?
Social Studies Skill	9-12
Chronological Thinking	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Compare present and past events to evaluate the consequences of past decisions and to apply lessons learned. • Analyze how change occurs through time due to shifting values and beliefs as well as technological advancements and changes in the political and economic landscape.
Spatial Thinking	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Construct various forms of geographic representations to show the spatial patterns of physical and human phenomena. • Relate current events to the physical and human characteristics of places and regions.
Critical Thinking	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Distinguish valid arguments from false arguments when interpreting current and historical events. • Evaluate sources for validity and credibility and to detect propaganda, censorship, and bias.
Presentational Skills	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Take a position on a current public policy issue and support it with historical evidence, reasoning, and constitutional analysis in a written and/or oral format.

BENCHMARK ASSESSMENTS: 3x Per year based on Social Studies skills using Stanford History Education Group assessments:

Establish historical significance

Use primary source evidence

Identify continuity and change

Analyze cause and consequence

Take historical perspectives

Understand the ethical dimension of historical interpretations

CRP1. Act as a responsible and contributing citizen and employee Career-ready individuals understand the obligations and responsibilities of being a member of a community, and they demonstrate this understanding every day through their interactions with others. They are conscientious of the impacts of their decisions on others and the environment around them. They think about the near-term and long-term consequences of their actions and seek to act in ways that contribute to the betterment of their teams, families, community and workplace. They are reliable and consistent in going beyond the minimum expectation and in participating in activities that serve the greater good.	In specific units students learn about the Enlightenment thinkers and how those concepts became the foundation for American Democracy and citizenship. Writings from John Locke, Thomas Hobbes, Voltaire, Montesquie and Rousseau are analyzed and parallels drawn between these ideas and modern civic engagement and civic virtue. As in all Social Studies classes, the importance of being an informed citizen and participant in our democracy are reinforced on a daily basis.	As in all Social Studies classes, the importance of being an informed citizen and participant in our democracy are reinforced on a daily basis. In US I a unit is dedicated to the origin and creation of the Constitution and how it established our system of government through checks and balances and federalism. Students learn about the 3 branches of government, the powers and members of each in modern day as well as examine key Supreme Court decisions that have shaped our nation, including current issues and decisions. Voter registration drives are also conducted in each school twice per year.	As in all Social Studies classes, throughout the US 2 curriculum the importance of being an informed citizen and participant in our democracy are reinforced on a daily basis. Supreme Court decisions relevant to each time period are examined, along with the election process. Students explore the Civil Rights Movement and Voting Right legislation.

CRP2. Apply appropriate academic and technical skills. Career-ready individuals readily access and use the knowledge and skills acquired through experience and education to be more productive. They make connections between abstract concepts with real-world applications, and they make correct insights about when it is appropriate to apply the use of an academic skill in a workplace situation	In all units of World History students engage in activities, assignments and projects to develop literacy, critical thinking, problem solving and technology skills that can be applied to the workplace.	In all units of US I students engage in activities, assignments and projects to develop literacy, critical thinking, problem solving and technology skills that can be applied to the workplace.	In all units of US II students engage in activities, assignments and projects to develop literacy, critical thinking, problem solving and technology skills that can be applied to the workplace.
CRP3. Attend to personal health and financial well-being. Career-ready individuals understand the relationship between personal health, workplace performance and personal well-being; they act on that understanding to regularly practice healthy diet, exercise and mental health activities. Career-ready individuals also take regular action to contribute to their personal financial wellbeing, understanding that personal financial security provides the peace of mind required to contribute more fully to their own career success.			Students engage in stock market analysis and personal finance simulations as part of the Great Depression/New Deal units

CRP4. Communicate clearly and effectively and with reason. Career-ready individuals communicate thoughts, ideas, and action plans with clarity, whether using written, verbal, and/or visual methods. They communicate in the workplace with clarity and purpose to make maximum use of their own and others’ time. They are excellent writers; they master conventions, word choice, and organization, and use effective tone and presentation skills to articulate ideas. They are skilled at interacting with others; they are active listeners and speak clearly and with purpose. Career-ready individuals think about the audience for their communication and prepare accordingly to ensure the desired outcome.

All units of World History include written, visual and verbal analysis of primary source documents and complex text to analyze historical questions clearly and effectively with reason. Specific texts and writing assignments are listed in each unit.

All units of US I include written, visual and verbal analysis of primary source documents and complex text to analyze historical questions clearly and effectively with reason. Specific texts and writing assignments are listed in each unit.

All units of US II include written, visual and verbal analysis of primary source documents and complex text to analyze historical questions clearly and effectively with reason. Specific texts and writing assignments are listed in each unit.

CRP5. Consider the environmental, social and economic impacts of decisions. Career-ready individuals understand the interrelated nature of their actions and regularly make decisions that positively impact and/or mitigate negative impact on other people, organization, and the environment. They are aware of and utilize new technologies, understandings, procedures, materials, and regulations affecting the nature of their work as it relates to the impact on the social condition, the environment and the profitability of the organization.

New technologies developed during the Scientific and Industrial Revolutions are examined and how they impacted the social, environmental and economic development of different regions of the world.

United States expansion in the 18th and 19th centuries created a seismic shift in the environment and landscape of North America. The industrial era formed a new reliance on resources that impacted the overall environment.

During the late 19th through the 20th century the United States grew exponentially. The economic expansion weighed heavily on the overall environment. As the century drew to a close, there became a greater awareness of the industrial expansion and government intervention and oversight became more prevalent.

CRP6. Demonstrate creativity and innovation.

Career-ready individuals regularly think of ideas that solve problems in new and different ways, and they contribute those ideas in a useful and productive manner to improve their organization. They can consider unconventional ideas and suggestions as solutions to issues, tasks or problems, and they discern which ideas and suggestions will add greatest value. They seek new methods, practices, and ideas from a variety of sources and seek to apply those ideas to their own workplace. They take action on their ideas and understand how to bring innovation to an organization.

All units in World History include problem- solving activities and simulations to apply historical concepts and skills to real-world, modern issues.

All units in US I include problem- solving activities and simulations to apply historical concepts and skills to real-world, modern issues.

All units in US II include problem- solving activities and simulations to apply historical concepts and skills to real-world, modern issues.

CRP7. Employ valid and reliable research strategies.

Career-ready individuals are discerning in accepting and using new information to make decisions, change practices or inform strategies. They use a reliable research process to search for new information. They evaluate the validity of sources when considering the use and adoption of external information or practices in their workplace situation.

All units of World History include assignments and projects that are research based and require students to examine the validity and reliability of various sources including primary, secondary, periodicals, library historical databases and online historical research databases.

All units of US II include assignments and projects that are research based and require students to examine the validity and reliability of various sources including primary, secondary, periodicals, library historical databases and online historical research databases.

CRP8. Utilize critical thinking to make sense of problems and persevere in solving them. Career-ready individuals readily recognize problems in the workplace, understand the nature of the problem, and devise effective plans to solve the problem. They are aware of problems when they occur and take action quickly to address the problem; they thoughtfully investigate the root cause of the problem prior to introducing solutions. They carefully consider the options to solve the problem. Once a solution is agreed upon, they follow through to ensure the problem is solved, whether through their own actions or the actions of others.	All units of World History include assignments and projects that require students to engage in critical thinking skills and problem-solving skills. Students examine the content specific problems from each time period of study, analyze various primary source documents, engage in biographical readings and examine how society addressed the problems at the time and how those problems and solutions may still be relevant to today.	All units of US I include assignments and projects that require students to engage in critical thinking skills and problem-solving skills. Career Options for Jobs that Involve Social Studies

Social studies focus on society, and social studies professionals may concentrate on understanding how people are shaped and influenced by peer groups, their culture, or other societal factors. While some social studies professionals primarily conduct research to determine how people are affected by social variables, others may focus on how these social variables can be used to predict people's behavior. A handful of these social studies career options are profiled below:

Career Information for Jobs that Involve Social Studies

Sociologists

Sociologists are professionals with a master's or doctoral degree in their field. They focus on understanding social groupings and behavior, and may be involved in research or make recommendations about how to address specific issues in society. Since their work focuses on understanding how society can influence behavior, they work within the field of social studies.

Historians

Historians research the past and educate people about historic events, artifacts or developments. Their work focuses on civilizations and incidents involving people in the past, which is why it falls within the social studies field. They might use the data from their research to form conclusions about why a society relocated or how cultural beliefs in a particular group evolved. They may need a doctoral degree, although it is possible to enter this field with a master's degree in history.

Postsecondary Teachers

Postsecondary teachers instruct college and university students in a specific subject they've specialized in. They typically need a doctoral degree, although entry-level positions may be obtained with a master's degree in some cases. Postsecondary teachers who instruct students in subjects such as criminology or history spend their career focused on social studies. As part of their work, postsecondary teachers usually also participate in research related to their specialty.

Anthropologists and Archeologists

Anthropologists and archeologists must have a master's or doctoral degree to work in their field. While archeologists may be involved in recovering historic artifacts from dig sites around the world, anthropologists focus on how humans have developed over time. Archeologists and anthropologists help discover evidence that relates to how cultures have evolved, how significant events have impacted people's behavior, and how social constructs, such as politics, have developed. Since they focus on issues related to society and behavior, they work within the field of social studies.

Political Scientists

Political scientists focus on the history and development of political systems. They may research political ideologies or study how political trends have evolved over time. They are social science professionals because understanding how politics shape society and impact individual and group behavior is part of what political scientists focus on. They are professionals with master's or doctoral degrees who perform research, analyze the information gained from their research, and use that data to develop predictions about the effects of political policies or structures.

Market Research Analysts

With a bachelor's degree, it's possible to become a market research analyst. Market research analysts examine consumer demographics, along with data collected from opinion polls and surveys, and then use what they learn to make recommendations about actions companies should or should not take. For example, they may recommend that a new product be developed and provide pertinent information about the customers they expect would be interested in that product. Market research analysts are professionals who focus on understanding what influences the purchasing decisions people make and the economic variables that should be considered when making business decisions. Since they focus on determining financial and societal factors that can affect consumer choices, their work involves the use of social studies.
