POLY ARMY JROTC "THE PARROT BATTALION"

Army JROTC's investment in the youth and future of America is reaping great rewards. In national statistics available as recently as the 2015 school year, Army JROTC students graduate at a higher rate (93 percent to 83 percent) and have lower rates of indiscipline (1.7 percent to 5.2 percent), higher GPA (2.91 to 2.72) and a lower dropout rate (less than 1 percent to 8 percent) than their non-JROTC peers. Collectively, Army JROTC students completed more than 9 million hours of community service during the academic year.

Without question, the examples of our retired service members have an influence on Army JROTC Cadets, but in no way is Army JROTC portrayed as a substitute for recruitment or an Army recruiting program. In the same 2015 school year, in an exit survey of our graduating seniors, 20 percent of our students expressed some interest in military service. Whether they acted on this interest it is not known, but we do know that about 1,000 college, full-tuition, highly competitive scholarships were awarded to JROTC students from all services to pursue an officer's commission in Senior ROTC programs.

The Armed Services are one of many options for our graduating high school seniors.

Army JROTC provides many opportunities for young citizens. It is one of many available to high school students, its track record provides sufficient evidence that it is one of the best leadership development and citizenship-focused programs in the country today.
