No Clew to Man Who Got Securities from National City.

No trace had been discovered up to a late bour yesterday of the securities, aggregating $360,000 in market value, which were obtained from the National City Bank on Wednesday by a stranger, who gave in exchange a forged check for $300,037 50. purporting to be drawn by the Stock Exchange firm of Pearl & Co., who had delivered the securities to the bank on Tuesday as collateral for a $300,000 call loan. As far as could be learned, no clew has been found to the identity of the thief. No employe of the City Bank is under suspicion, it is declared, and no blame is attached to the loan clerk who accepted the check and delivered over the securities. The swindle, bank officers say, is the first of its kind in the history of Wall Street, and they add that it will not be easy for another thief to duplicate the exploit of Wednesday. Frank A. Vanderlip, one of the vice-presidents of the National City Bank, said yesterday,

In discussing the theft:

In discussing the theft:

Pearl & Co. made a loan here in the ordinary way. On Wednesday a check, apparently of the firm of Pearl & Co., was presented here, drawn on the Hanover National Bank, and with a certification made for the exact amount of the face of the loan, plus the interest for one day. This shows that the person who made the forgery had known the details of the loan—the firm, the rate of interest and the amount.

The check was, of course, a forgery. It had the name of Pearl & Co. printed across the end of it, the check being one of the regular Hanover Bank checks. The forgery of the name of Mr. Burns, paying teller of the Hanover Bank was especially good. The certification stamped on the face of the check is made, apparently, with a stamp which is an exact copy of the Hanover stamp. The name of Pearl & Co. is not so good, but it is the certification that a teller looks at. Fully three-quarters of the messenger work is done by boys from fifteen to eighteen years old. Millions and millions in securities and checks, and sometimes in actual cash, are sent along with just such boys. They come with an envelope full of securities and put them through the window. Sometimes there are a dozen boys in line. It would be a comparatively easy thing for a bright young fellow to look over the shoulder of another messenger and read on the back of the envelope he is carrying all the details of the transaction.

We do not say that such a thing was done in the details of the transaction all the details of the transaction.

We do not say that such a thing was done in this case, but we do not suspect anybody in this bank. We think it is very likely that the thing was done in just some such way.

We do not believe that there can be any loss We do not believe that there can be any loss resulting from this transaction. The transfer offices of all the companies have been warned of the theft of the securities, and we have not heard of any attempt to negotiate them. We would without doubt have heard of it by this time if anybody had bought these securities or received them in any way.

Even if through the connivance of a brokerage house they had been taken in, we should not lose anything, because these were stolen securities.

E. F. Slayback, of the firm of Pearl & Co., took a slightly different view of the situation from that taken by the bank officials. The firm cannot lose anything, for the City Bank has already adjusted with Pearl & Co. But Mr. Slayback thinks that there is a chance that the thief may have realized something on the securities. He said:

It is a mysterious case, and I think it is up to the Pinkertons. I do not think it is the work of any boy, although a boy may have presented the check at the window. A thief would have a hard time getting rid of the stocks stolen, especially down here in Wall Street; but I don't think it impossible for him to have necessitated the Tohacco and Wahash bonds. The I don't think it impossible for him to have negotiated the Tobacco and Wabash bonds. The Tobacco 6s are coupon bonds, mand they are worth over $50,000. If he could negotiate them alone he could throw the rest away. Those bonds have coupons payable on October 1. He could be a coupon.

I think that the fact that our signature is forged so poorly and that the interest rate on our books is a different one from that on the books of the bank shows that the thief did not get his data from our office.

Inquiry at the United States and among leading Stock Exchange firms showed that under the customary usage the American Tobacco bonds could be readily negotiated, being made payable to bearer and the ownership passing without the formality of a transfer on the books of the company. With his twenty-four hours' start the thief could have reached Boston or Philadelphia and sold the bonds or obtained a loan on them before the news of the theft became public. By shrewdly altering the numbers on the other securities he may even have realized on them before the rob-bery became known, according to the freely ex-pressed opinion of several well known Stock Brchange members.

The theft apparently was planned some time ago. The perpetrator's first step must have been to get possession of a check which had been certified by the Hanover National Bank. This check to get possession of a check which had been certified by the Hanover National Bank. This check he must have held long enough to enable a certification stamp to be made—the work was skilfully done and took time—and the signature of the paying teller, Burns, to be so accurately copied that it could be successfully forged when the moment for action arrived. It would not be difficult to get a blank check of the Hanover Bank, but the forger, to obtain the Pearl & Co. collateral, had to print across the end of the check the name of Pearl & Co., who are not customers of the Hanover National Bank. As the City Bank officers point out, it would be easy for any one in the line before the loan window to learn what the messenger ahead of him in the line carried in his hand in the way of collateral, as the messenger bears to the bank a large oblong envelope containing the collateral, and having on its outside the printed name of the firm making the loan, the amount of the loan, the rate of interest and a list of the securities in the parcel. With the Hanover Bank check in hand and the certification stamp and the supplementary signature of the paying teller forged, the thief would still have had to have a chance to imitate the signature of Pearl & Co., but for this the getting possession of a signed letter or memorandum would have answered as well as a check drawn by Pearl & Co. It is believed by some that the thief may have taken copies of the signatures of other firms in the Street, and that if he had seen the loan envelope of one of those houses, representing a larger sum than the Pearl loan, he might have forged the name of that firm instead of Pearl & Co.'s on the prepared Hanover Bank check which the City Bank's loan firm instead of Pearl & Co.'s on the prepared Hanover Bank check which the City Bank's loan clerk accepted from him.

SYNDICATE GETS JERSEY BANK.

A syndicate of New-York bankers has acquired a controlling interest in the Second National Bank of Jersey City by purchasing a block of the stock of President William Hogencamp and George W. Young. The price paid is said to have been 140. President Hogencamp admitted yesterday that he had sold some of his stock, but said the sale would not bring about any change in the management of the bank. Mr. Young also confirmed the sale and explained that he sold for the reason that he got a good price for the stock. He added that the purchasers were men of the highest standing in the financial world, and that his own friendly relations with the bank will continue.

Calcutta, Sept. 29 .- The Bank of Bengal to-day advanced its rate of discount from 4 to 5 per cent.

Mr. Cerf will visit commercial bodies in the East for the purpose of acquainting manufacturers with the plan of exhibit.

Several weeks ago threatening letters were received by Henry S. Brush, who has a general store; George W. Conklin, grain merchant; W. Sir: We hereby demand that you place $1,000 under the bridge at New-York-ave. You will find a diagram on back of this. This warning means your death if you don't comply with our wishes. We do not give you a whole year to place this small amount, but just a few short hours. We want this money there by Thursday, 4 p. m., August 24. On the back of the letter was a rough diagram of the location named in the letter.

On the receipt of a similar threatening letter demanding $1,000 by a Mrs. Willets she caused to be placed under a stone, where the writer had directed her to place it, a letter containing had directed her to place it, a letter containing $4. This letter was taken off by some one, and Mrs. Willets received another communication from the "Bad Gang" demanding that she place the balance of the $1,000 in the same place. Mrs. Willets consulted the authorities and then caused to be placed under the stone an envelope filled with pieces of blank paper.

A guard was set on the place and two well known young men were seen to approach the stone and take the envelope.

Counsel for Defense in Syrian Colony Case Makes Strong Statement.

After spending several fruitless hours yesterday in an attempt to sift the troubles of the Syrian colony, Magistrate Mayo, in the Tombs court, threw up his hands in despair and adjourned the case to October 18. The crowd of loquacious and beiligerent Syrians in the court were then escorted home by a detail of the court police.

The faithful were not allawed to receive Bishop Hawaweeny's blessing as at the previous hearing, and the Bishop was escorted to and from the court by six patrolmen. Most of the from the court by six patrolmen. Most of the time was taken bup by wranging between James W. Osborne for the defence and Assistant District Attorney Garvan. In answer to a question by the court, Charles Le Barbier, one of the counsel for the defence, said that he could get five hundred Syrians to prove that the Bishop had committed perjury several times.

President Oakman Turns on Power That Links Two States.

W. G. Oakman, president of the Hudson Companies, yesterday afternoon turned on the hydraulic power which knocked away the six-foot wall separating the south tunnel tube, running from Jersey City to Christopher-st, under the Hudson River, from the tunnel connection on the Manhattan side. This tube is the second of the tubes driven under the river bed, and it is hoped that trains will be operating between this island and the New-Jersey shore within a year or eighteen months.

The directors and officials of the Hudson Companies, about fifty guests, including newspaper representatives, witnessed the opening of the pared for trains, and in it, ninety feet under the Hudson River, the guests celebrated the occasion with a luncheon and listened to

So Says Health Commissioner Darlington-$10,000 in Penalties.

Commissioner Darlington of the Department of Health said yesterday that the milk supply of the city had never been better. Recently, the Commissioner stated, thirty-three places where milk was obtained in the city limits were condemned by his department as public nuisances. In these places the Commissioner stated there were more than eight hundred cows. Oren Root, jr., general manager of the New-York City Railway Company, was a passenger on the Lucania, which arrived last night from

Mr. Root has been away five weeks, and while in London looked carefully into its system of traffic management. Speaking of London, Mr. Root said:

Root said:

There is no comparison between the transportation systems of London and New-York. New-York is far ahead in every detail. London has no cars at all except the underground, and, to be plain, the underground cars over there are simply vile. The police of New-York have their traffic system under much better control than the police of London. I believe the great congestion found in many districts of London is chiefly due to the exceedingly narrow streets.

Beautiful Millinery And Not Extravagantly Priced

We were the first to put in practice the selling of Trimmed Hats at popular prices . . . . When, some years ago, our first announcement to this effect appeared, great was the consternation created-for a trimmed hat was looked upon as something on which a fanciful profit must be made....Success of our departure from this policy gradually caused others to follow-but we lead as ever in values. Our Millinery Offerings are Matchless!
