Tennant High School

Tennant was a logging town built by the Long-Bell Lumber Company. When the town was established, the company issued instruction that as few trees as possible should be cut; therefore the town stands in the midst of a forest. The high school is surrounded by large pines.

The Tennant High School was built in 1925 and the first classes were held in 1926. The last school year was 1946-1947 when the school closed for lack of pupils. The high school and elementary school were in the same building.

The town of Tennant was sold by the lumber company to private individuals. The elementary and high school building still stand in the community.
