

Just For Guys

SCENARIO

For years Adam, Aaron and Andy have called themselves the "Three Aces." As neighbors they did everything together; climbed trees, caught frogs, camped out and built a fort not to be equaled.

The "Three Aces," now in middle school, still hang out together when not busy with other things. There are some big changes though:

Adam has a deep voice and is hoping to shave soon. The guys tease him about the "peach fuzz," but he feels proud.

Aaron talks about "chicks" a lot. He likes kissing and all the stuff that goes along with it. He brags a lot these days.

Andy feels left out. He keeps looking for hair and muscles and girls, but is ashamed none of the three are appearing in his life. He sweats a lot these days and has acne.

The "Three Aces" notice that growing up seems to happen later for boys than it does for girls. Some guys worry about things that have or have not happened to them. Can you give some advice to these three guys?
