From Coastline to Wasteline...to the Finish Line: ISN Team Wins Best Performance Prize at Junk Kouture World Final in Monaco

The Junk Kouture Team from International School of Nice proudly represented their school at the Junk Kouture World Final held in Monaco last night, clinching the prize for Best Performance. Junk Kouture, a platform challenging young minds to transform recycled materials into haute couture, celebrates innovation, sustainability, and artistic expression.

Under the mentorship of Mrs. Curtis, the school's Director, three ISN students - Vega, Luisa, and Lily - embarked on a journey to create a stunning piece of wearable art as part of their involvement in Changemakers sessions. Changemakers is an enrichment program at ISN, empowering students beyond academics, fostering talents, and nurturing visionary change-makers. Additionally, as a proud member of Globeducate, ISN Nice prepares each student to be a global citizen who can shape the world, and participating in Junk Couture shows the impact young people can have on the future of sustainability.

The Team created the design during Grade 11 and Grade 12 and made it through to the Junk Kouture Paris City Final, where they were one of the top 10 designs selected to participate in the World Final. The now ISN alumni returned from university to participate in the prestigious Junk Kouture World Final, held in Monaco last night.

Drawing inspiration from the azure hues of the Mediterranean and the timeless elegance of French fashion, the students crafted a mesmerising ensemble using materials sourced from beach clean-ups and local collaborations. With meticulous attention to detail, they fashioned a resplendent gown symbolising their dedication to environmental stewardship and sustainable fashion.

Reflecting on their design process, the students remarked, "Our creation embodies the essence of our coastal surroundings while advocating for sustainable fashion choices. From repurposed cardboard to upcycled soda tabs, every element tells a story of environmental consciousness and creativity."

ISN's triumph at the Junk Kouture World Final is a beacon of inspiration for embracing sustainable practices in fashion.
