Hispanic Heritage Month 2024

by K. Story

The EHS Library is honoring Hispanic Heritage month with a display of fiction, non-fiction, and graphic novels. One book I read last year thanks to Hihtoo, the Equity Book Club President, is Promises of Gold by Jose Olivarez. Poetry is usually not my jam, but this collection is an exception. The poems are powerfully composed and the content accessible and relatable. One of my favorites talks about how the pandemic brought many inequities to the surface and how the poet felt like punching Jeff Bezos in the face and that part made me LOL. There was another poem about how, as a teenager, his parents listened to a Journey type band and he thought that was super dorky. I could relate to that. I really admire the combination of vulnerability and confidence the poet expresses in these various lyrics. I highly recommend this book for Hispanic Heritage Month or any time of year.
