								Attached here is a new scan of the Driveway Dimensions. I will do my best to explain the driveway building plan and details of the expansion. The retainer wall is 26'-6" in length and a height of 15" tall, Width of the block is 8". The cement blocks will be about 8-10in beneath the level surface for soil support/ and structural support. For Each Cinder block, 2 (3' by 5/8) rebar will be driven into the ground with addition, filled with concrete to keep the blocks from sliding down or aroding. The extra 5-7 in of the cinder block height will provide gravel from rolling down the hill or off the driveway/ Driveway curb. The remaining 3' of the supporting wall will only be a height of 7.5" to tie into the asphalt and to level out to the original driveway. The Width of the new driveway (brick wall to concrete retainer wall) is exactly 11'-10" The amount of total gravel driveway measures to be 23'-6" by 11'-0 (not including retainer wall) will have a minimum of 4-6" of gravel depth with underlayment fabric for weeds and gravel retention. I also will be adding in privacy shrubs (6-8 shrubs) of a height of between 6 to 7 feet (Evergreen) on my property/ and or close to the property line. The Gravel and landscape of the driveway will be at a slight angle (downhill) and will Gide the water onto my existing property(or current old driveway in place now). The retainer wall of the new driveway expansion will keep the water from eroding away soil and Gide water down hill away from neighbors property and a straight path onto mine.

Convert 2nd floor storage room to a 4th bedroom. My house completed construction in 2019 and at the time the builder provisioned the storage room to enable future completion as a bedroom. The 25x12 storage room has an egress window, is fully insulated, has HVAC ducting connecting to the basement (but not tied into the HVAC system), and has electric power to a single outlet and and overhead light fixture. The flooring is sub-flooring. To convert this room to a 4th bedroom I will hire a licensed electrician, a licensed HVAC company, a drywall installer and a flooring installer. The electrician and HVAC company will separately apply for their permits with the town.
