Superintendent's Message

Hockinson Community,

June is a time to reflect on our district's motto of preparing students for lifelong success. As we look back on this school year, we celebrate the diverse accomplishments of our students and the many ways we have supported their preparedness for the future. Our school leaders are committed to being student-centered in every decision we make and our recent WASA leadership award illustrates this unwavering focus on our students' learning and growth.

This month, we also celebrate our graduates. Graduation is a significant achievement for our seniors, marking the culmination of years of hard work and perseverance. However, their success is shared by our families and community. These students couldn't have reached this point without your guidance, support, and care. Whether your contributions have been at home, in school, or from afar, every Hockinson resident has played a role in providing opportunities for the Class of 2024.

As we look ahead, our back-to-school events represent an annual refresh that fills our students with optimism, energy, and hope. Every new school year also brings a renewed commitment to providing our learners with the best possible educational and extracurricular experiences.

High-quality public schools are the product of a shared belief in the power of education and the unlimited potential of future generations. I am so grateful that Hockinson believes in its schools and its students. Together, we really are lifting up our students to new heights and that creates a brighter future for all of us.

- Steve Marshall
