

Why do you PTO?

The struggle is real, but it's worth it.

For me it's to make sure my kids, and the others, have a great experience and fun at school. Regardless of ALL the frustrations and headaches.

—Robin P.

It's also something I can fill in my resume gap with while I'm a SAHM.

—JoAnn R.

The rewards don't come in money but when children of your school come up to you and give you hugs, say thanks for [a] fun time. Parents walk up to you and say their kids had a great time. That's the reward.

—Mandi N.

We love our teachers and we love our kids.

—Allison S.

I think of what I'd like the school to be like for my kids and try my best to make things happen.

—Tina W.

I do it for the kids. In that aspect it is very rewarding to see kids enjoy themselves as a result of something the PTO has done.

—Marcie H.

I do it for the relationships...

I've built great relationships with the principal, my children's teachers, and the other staff members.

—Ashley W.

I do it because I want to help... and it sure does feel good to give back.

—Cassandra M.
