Incoming Grade 7 Summer Reading
Ideal Bookshelf

"I paint sets of books as a form of portraiture: a person's favorites (of all time, within a genre or from a particular period in their lives); the ones that helped make them who they are today.

We show off our books on shelves like merit badges, because we're proud of the ideas we've ingested to make us who we are, as we should be. The spine of a book is a sort of code for the giant cloud of ideas the author included within it. Just ten of them together on a sheet of paper tells the story of the mind that picked them in a way that is easily digestible but allows for endless study." ~ Jane Mount, writer, illustrator, and founder of Ideal Bookshelf

For the Summer Reading Assignment, you will be adding at least one book from our book recommendation list to your ideal bookshelf. As you read, take notes about how the book connects to your personal experiences in the real world and your experiences in the imaginary worlds of other books you have read.

When you return to school in September, you will be discussing your reading life with your classmates. Bring your notes about your personal connections to the book and an illustration of your ideal bookshelf.

Some ideas for the illustration of your ideal bookshelf.

the next book you want to read book given as a gift from a friend or family member hardest book you read the book whose protagonist is most like you book whose setting you'd love to escape to book that made you cry, laugh or scream in frustration longest book you read book that you feel was written just for you a book you read over and over again book the setting of which feels like home a book whose characters feel like friends
