

Journey to the Future with This Year's Virtual Transition Partnership Program Career Day

Now more than ever, we see the need to provide students with engaging learning experiences that expose them to different postsecondary options and the resources necessary to achieve them.

The future has never been closer as we prepare to host this year's virtual Transition Partnership Program (TPP) Career Day and Resource Fair, Journey to the Future, for Inland Empire students enrolled in high school transition programs.

This free virtual experience will feature a variety of inspirational resources, guest speakers, and recorded sessions which will allow students to identify local high-need industry careers and the essential skills they require.

By creating a flexible and robust virtual space to showcase a number of key industry sectors, we hope student participants will be able to access this transformative information at their own pace. We know not all student learn the same way, and felt it was important to accommodate each participant's needs by providing access to this outstanding virtual event through the end of May.

I want to thank all our regional Special Education Local Plan Areas (SELPA), the Alliance for Education teams as well as all our collaborative partners who have worked tirelessly to bring this high-quality virtual experience for students looking to explore potential careers and begin planning for their futures.

Our students have great potential. I believe their talents and

Foster and Homeless Youth Summit Amplified Student Voice

With approximately 10,000 youth in foster care between San Bernardino and Riverside Counties, it is heartening to know so many educators are dedicated to improving the lives of our most vulnerable students.

On March 11, nearly 500 participants attended the 7th Annual Foster and Homeless Youth Services Summit. This virtual event provides excellent training opportunities for homeless and foster youth liaisons who are focused on ways to increase equity across the Inland Empire.

The students we serve are their own best advocates. Providing a platform for students to share their stories and perspectives is an important aspect of this conference that I look forward to every year. Their testimonies truly resonate with participants and offer key insights on the best ways we can continue giving them the support they need.

Keynote speaker, Rodney Walker, shared powerful stories of overcoming obstacles in the foster care system and how he became a graduate of Harvard and Yale University.

I am continuously inspired to see attendees participate in honest and open discussions about how to better serve and improve educational outcomes for youth in foster care or experiencing homelessness.

It is my hope that by creating a safe space for student advocacy, events like this can contribute lasting impact to our educational institutions. As educators and community leaders, we have a strong moral duty to help students reach their full potential and heal along the way.
