TYNGSBORO — With the latest school year right around the corner, the Greater Lowell Technical High School welcomed incoming ninth graders during their Freshmen Welcome Days event last month.

For the event, which took place on July 27 and July 28, students were split into two groups, each attending one of the two days.

The group of incoming ninth graders were welcomed by Superintendent and Director Jill Davis, along with Assistant Superintendent and Principal Michael Barton. This was followed by a presentation from faculty about the school's core values of Respect, Effort, Accountability, Commitment and Honesty (REACH).

Students were given campus tours by Greater Lowell Tech Student Leaders who helped organize the event. Students also participated in icebreaker activities, and received school T-shirts and a “Freshman Needs to Know Booklet,” which provided advice for starting high school.

Incoming ninth graders had the opportunity to talk to a panel of upperclassmen before they headed to a cookout for lunch. After lunch, students made their way to the football field where they took their first Greater Lowell Tech class picture.

“It was a wonderful day for students to connect with peers and tour the school that will be their home for the next four years,” Davis said. “I want to wish them well as they prepare for their first day and I am excited to see these students learn and grow over the next four years.”

The new school year is set to commence for all Greater Lowell Tech students on Wednesday, Aug. 31.
