TYNGSBORO -- In a continued effort to strengthen the partnership between Greater Lowell Technical High School and its families, the school invited all families of current students to attend the school's Back to School Night.

The event provided families an opportunity to follow their students' schedule, allowing teachers time to present course expectations and provide an overview of the curriculum, grading policies and supports in place to assist students throughout the school year.

Twenty-seven student ambassadors assisted at the event.

"Our students receive the best education when there is a school-family partnership," Assistant Superintendent-Principal Jill Davis said. "Back to School Night is designed to strengthen this partnership by providing parents and guardians with the opportunity to meet each of their child's teachers and learn important information about each of his or her academic and technical classes."

The 23 technical programs were also open for families to visit.
