Senior Class History

Here, written on this page, are thirteen years of a class about to graduate. It is with mixed emotions that we look at our past memories and the ultimate graduation.

Miss Mary Disparti and Mrs. Eleanor McDonell taught us to bring handkerchiefs to school, and do you remember the girls building forts to keep the alligators out, guys? In kindergarten, the treat was to be able to get a turn on one of the tractors.

In first grade we were introduced to Mrs. Virginia Horner and Mrs. Mary Hosmer, and Jim Burdick joined us for our first year of "real" school. Receiving report eards with numerical grades made us feel very grownup.

Mrs. Helen Steenrod and Mrs. Virjean Francis greeted us at the second grade doors, and we also met Dave Gowdy and Dave Mehlenbacher. Reading groups were introduced to us that year, and does anyone remember fighting over who sat next to Dana Presutti during lunch?

Third grade found Ros Gowdy, Bev Kemp, and Linda Snyder amongst us. Mrs. Bernice Hall and Mrs. Laurel Alexander battled our rowdy troop that year. Many stories have beentold of the underside of Mrs. Alexander's desk, and a few people still have nightmares about that frightening experience.

Fourth grade brought out the acting ability in many of us as Mrs. Frances Swain, a student teacher, helped us present "Around the World at Christmas Time". Mrs. Lois Boyer and Miss Ruth Rossney tried to keep our minds on studying, and Dave Ross entered our classes' learning experiences. Remember him with a brush cut?

In fifth grade, Jim Frungillo, Jon Lehman, Wesley Raub, Cheryl Stanton, and Sandy Wigent joined us, and Janiece Tucker came back to stay. Mrs. Patricia Tompkins and Mr. Delmer Jackson were our homeroom teachers, and we were proud to be mature enough to change classes. Mrs. Tompkins made us memorize state capitals, and we were the first class to hatch baby chicks out of an incubator. Diane Quaintance took our only survivor home to grow in a farmyard with others of its kind.

Ken Chalker was added to our sixth grade, while Mrs. Bessie Gilmore and Mrs. Freda Tower taught us what school was all about. We wore dunce caps, baby bonnets, and gum on our noses, but we also learned some of the finer points of education. Poetry memorization and recitation was very scary for most of us, but we lost some of our shyness in front of people.

We greeted Mrs. Doris Wells and Mr. Richard Rose in seventh grade with the help of Kay Gaus and Steve Tracy. Math became a serious threat that year and science a reality. Our two minutes between bells was spent kicking lockers because the combinations never worked. We also learned about corridor passes, and Mrs. Wells taught us the joys of homework.

Eighth grade continued in much the same flurry. Kris Perkins joined our race with Mr. Robert Boyer and Mr. Carleton Campbell in the lead. Miss Sharon Simons tried to tame us that year but to no avail.

Leaving eighth grade behind, we took on the responsibilities of freshmen. Mary Hetz came to us, along with the mysteries of athletics, clubs, initiation and regents. We also got to be friends with upper classmen who before had been just idols. Mr. James Lockwood made science more than just an educational experience, remember? Mrs. Marian Burke and Mr. Michael Palmiter were our homeroom teachers that year.

Many remember tenth grade spent running down to Mrs. Irma Presutti's room for homeroom periods and then running upstairs for classes. The rest of us raised our hands for permission to talk during this time in Mr. Palmiter's homeroom. June brought the famous flood, and a strange feeling of hopelessness. One good thing about it, though, was the postponement of the Biology regents until August.

Paulette Merrill, Sylvia Troidl, and Don Burdick joined us in our junior year. Half of us spent homeroom with Mrs. Diane Comiskey (quite a change from Mr. Palmiter) while the other half was still running up and down stairs. A successful class auction was held that fall when we really started working towards the senior trip. Eleven, a record number, were welcomed into the National Honor Society. "Nights in White Satin", our prom theme, saw Dana Presutti and Melissa Pike crowned king and queen. Dave Ross, Tim Warner, Sid Miller, Sue Tronetti, Lynn Winterhalter, and Deb Hunt were the royal court. We lost our class president, Cindy Jeffords, that year—but to a good cause.

Rose Fluent has joined us for our last year in Belmont Central School. Magazine sales were the last project before Washington, then—we were there. Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Cline and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Hanchett suffered through four glorious days with us and still kept their sanity.

Whatever the years ahead bring, whether we see classmates again or not, we have many happy memories of them. Some make us laugh, and others cry, but they were good times. One experience without the other would leave it meaningless. We continue towards graduation wishing we could stop time, but knowing that "You can never lose that which you remember".
