Career Fair gives students learning opportunities

Raeleigh Wyrick
staff writer

It's was that time of year again, the annual Career Fair! This was a great opportunity for students to begin looking into what they want to do as a future career.

The career fair was held on Wed., Oct. 24, from 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m..

Students were excused by grades at assigned times to go to the gymnasium.

"This was a great opportunity for our middle school students to see what they will be interested in and what they will need to work towards," academic advisor Taasha Viets said.

When you enter high school it's best to have a general idea of what you would like to be. If you want to be a welder then you need to take shop classes. A person who wants to be a veterinarian needs to meet the class requirements for the college they would like to attend.

"This isn't social time with your friends. Engage with the people there because they are experts in their field.

Don't be shy to them they are here to help you," Viets said.

Some of the many businesses and colleges attending were: The Coffeyville

Journal, FKHS Health Science program, Talent Search, Ranken Technical College, 4-State Maintenance, John Deere, Keller Williams Realty, Coffeyville Recreation Commission, Heritage Homes, Realty, Coffeyville Fire Department, Spartan College, KGGF Radio, Coffeyville Regional Medical Center, Memories by Mandy, Community National Bank, Kansas Teacher's Credit Union, Grace Fellowship Church, Windsor Place, and several different programs from Coffeyville Community College.

Briggs answers pressing questions about teenage experiences

Dear Eli,
How should you explain to a rude grandma that you can make your own choices?

Hello my friend!

As someone that has been a child living with adults for 17 years, as well as someone who has lived on their own for a short period of time, I've learned a lot about discipline and making your own decisions.

Try to think about what these choices are. Make sure they are nothing off the wall. If you're 16 and want a tattoo, that's probably considered unreasonable by most adults (although, it really depends on your maturity level, but that's a whole other can of worms).

If the choice is something a little more temporary, such as a haircut, or an extension on your curfew, I suggest preparing evidence of your maturity level, like the fact that you have a job, or that your grades have been good, if those things apply to you, and that you're able to make these choices. Talk to her, and be polite, respectful, and calm.

Good luck, babydoll!
 -Eli

Dear Eli,
How do you make it through high school?

The greatest advice I can provide, is when you feel like you can't continue caring, and you're on the verge of becoming completely apathetic, remember that high school only lasts four years. You won't be here forever, even though it seems that way on the bad days.

As a freshman, I was completely lost as to why I was in school. Both of my parents didn't complete high school past their freshman year, and I was almost certain I would end up the same way. It is very difficult to be coming-of-age in 2018, especially when you feel so pressured into making life long choices when you don't even have a driver's license yet, which is often what we find ourselves facing as young high school students.

One day, however, you will be a senior.

You will think about all you've been through. You will think about all of the mistakes you've made, and it will hit you. This is it. This is your last chance to prove to the world that you didn't waste the past 17 years.

Don't wait until your senior year to prove your greatness. Start when you're a freshman. Show your school spirit, even if your friends think it is stupid. Your sophomore year, read a poem in your English class that you wrote about your mother.

Your junior year, love who you are and stop trying to fit into boxes that other people want you to be in. When you're a senior, you will look back, and be proud.

Live these years and dream bigger than you ever have before.

The only way to make it is by experiencing these years. Don't walk on eggshells. Just live.

Meet Tornado Times Editor staff

Zeus Boomershine
staff writer

Newspapers have always been a source for information that's been used for years, but how do these newspapers get put together? Editors! These people are who do the hard work and ensure that everything is in place. Our editor staff consists of Kimberley Moore, editor-in-chief; Olivia Roesky, sports editor; Elias Briggs, editorial editor; Drew Cormier, features editor; and Autumn Mersberg, photo editor.

As an editor their responsibilities are to come up with content that is current for their page, work with the writers that are writing the stories for their page, and laying out their pages.

"It's fun, it gets hard when it gets closer to press time," Cormier said. "The hardest part about being an editor is when people don't have their stories done on time."

According to Cormier, he believes that being an editor will help in the future with getting stuff turned in and done on time.

Some students like Roesky are overachievers, as she is sports editor for both the newspaper and yearbook.

According to her, the hardest part about being an editor is also when people don't turn in anything or when people don't write long enough stories.

Taking charge of the Opinions page is Briggs, a senior at Field Kindley.

According to Briggs he plans to use this editor experience after high school when he goes into Journalism at the college level. He

"I like it a lot. I enjoy being able to contribute to our publication," Briggs said. He plans to pursue a career as a political journalist.

For the second year in a row Moore is the editor-in-chief of our school newspaper and works to make each issue interesting and informative for our school.

Most of the photos in the newspaper are shot and edited by Mersberg. As photo editor it is her job to shoot photos that go along with the stories written in the newspaper.

The newspaper staff reporters includes five freshmen, one junior, and two seniors. "The creative flow you can feel in the classroom is my favorite part of class," senior Zeus Boomershine said.

The staff writers are in charge of conducting interviews and writing stories. "The hardest part of writing a story is knowing how to start the story," junior Raeleigh Wyrick said. Stories have their difficulties but all the staff writers are able to get it done. People underestimate how hard it is to write a story, make it good enough, and complete it on time.

"I think newspaper will help me in the future because it will help me write stories," freshman Victoria Westerfield said.

Newspaper is a good class to take if you want to pursue a job that requires researching and writing, because in newspaper you learn the basics of writing.

"Students learn how to write questions, conduct interviews and write accurate and timely stories," newspaper adviser Beth

FKHS Journalism department has social media presence

Raeleigh L. Wyrick
staff writer

The Field Kindley Journalism department has a Facebook page, called FKHS News. The page posts academic and club activities that are happening at the high school.

"The page was created to promote student highlights such as Student of the Month, and other non-sport related events that happen at the high school," journalism teacher Beth Conrad said. "Nado Nation does a great job of promoting sports and Student Council activities, but our page tries to cover those other positive things that are happening at our

This year freshman Jaylee Maggard is in charge of creating weekly posts for the page.

According to Maggard, she enjoys writing for Facebook and the newspaper because she gets to talk to a lot of different people. She also feels that adding photos to her posts makes it more interesting and engaging.

So next time you are on Facebook, search for FKHS News and like our page.

Cross Country finishes up Season at Regionals

Drew Cormier
features editor

Cross country did very well this year with four of their runners achieving personal records. This past weekend, the team traveled to Chanute to compete in Regionals to end their season.

Constantly working through the season to better themselves, the team of 11 boys worked hard every day to get a little bit faster than the day before.

According to Mrs. Woodward, coach of the FKHS cross country team, team members ran between two and eight miles every day, which doesn't include warm up laps, and stamina drills.

“We like to push ourselves to the limit,” Woodward said. “It’s hard to win, but it’s worth it.”

The team was made up of seven seniors: Josh Isle, Jacob Mund, Jacob Reiner, Ian Palmer, Nick Shafer, Conner Westbrook, and Kyle Jones.

“It was exciting to see the seniors during their last season, and see how they’ve improved,” Woodward said.

Volleyball finishes tough season

Olivia Roesky
sports editor

The Lady Nado volleyball team finished their season last Saturday at Sub-State with a 1-2 loss to Kansas City-Piper.

According to coach Stacey Campbell practicing for volleyball included focusing on the weaknesses rather than the strengths.

According to junior Shelby Coons' it's important that her teammates are confident enough to address their mistakes in front of each other, because that's what a team is all about, admitting your mistakes and fixing them together.

Seniors on the team were: Sydney Coons and Alexis Moore-Kendrex. The Varsity team ended the season with an 0-12 league record and a 4-28 overall season record.

Young Tennis team ends the Season well

Victoria Westerfield
staff writer

The Girls Tennis season finished up several weeks ago. At the Chanute JV Tennis Invitational, sophomore Makayla Ross finished in second place in the number two singles division. She received a medal at the meet for her efforts. The other team members placed from 5th place to 8th place.

The final meet of the season for the team was at Pittsburg and unfortunately all girls lost to Pittsburg with no wins.

According to head coach Brian Nagle, individual motivation continued to be a challenge this season.

“We will continue working on fundamentals next year to help players become better,” Nagle said.

They started the season off with 11 girls and finished with 9 players, including one who hurt her wrist and was no longer able to play.

“I am grateful to have the girls to coach and encourage others to go out for tennis next year,” Nagle said.

Soccer headed into Regional play this week

Juana Francisco-Andres
staff writer

Let's kick in some Field Kindley High School news from the soccer team. The head coach, Courey Freerer, has been training our soccer players for two seasons now.

From the very first game, they had some "question marks" going into the fall season because they lost their midfield. "Players have all stepped up and learned their roles well," Freerer said.

"The team has a very strong bond," Freerer said. The varsity has won 14 games, lost two, and tied one. "How-ever communication on the field is a weakness for the team."

One of the strengths of the team is they care about each other and they work very hard together. According to Freerer, when one of the players is not participating or is acting out, he would try to motivate them to work hard on the field.

Varsity player Emilio Marcos, has been on the varsity team for two seasons now. His position is center mid-field.

One of Marcos' weaknesses is passing the ball to the players. According to Marcos, it is hard to adjust the passing and communicating with the players when they play on the field.

One of his favorite memories of soccer is when his varsity team won medals and trophies. He admires the professional soccer players and is inspired by playing soccer and running.

JV freshman player Kevin Huerta, has been playing soccer since he was five years old. He plays right midfield.

One of his weaknesses on the field is his stamina. His strength is passing the ball to his teammates.

According to Huerta, he has improved on passing and juggling throughout this season. "What gets me motivated is knowing I can still make varsity," Huerta said.

Huerta looks up to professional soccer player Ronaldo, because he has worked hard to be at the level he is at professionally.

"One of my favorite soccer memories is from not knowing about soccer to being a good player now," Huerta said.

This season has continued into Regionals and the team will play tonight at home against Hays Thomas More Prep for the Regional Championship. Come out and support the team as they play hard to win tonight. Game starts at 6 p.m.

Football season heads into playoffs

Breanna Bradshaw
staff writer

As the football season is winding down the football team has won four games and lost four games. They have played very competitive but have lost some heart breaking close games. They are hoping to clear up some of their mistakes and finish the season on a high note as they go into playoffs this week. According to coach Darrin

Wegner, they have good team speed, but just need to play for 48 minutes instead of 3 quarters.

Senior quarterback Jaylen Logan has led the SEK all season in touchdowns.

As the Nado football team heads into the first round of playoffs tomorrow night they face El Dorado here at 7 p.m.

Come out and support the Nado football team as they play for a chance to advance to the next round of playoffs.
