Flu Vaccination

Why should people get vaccinated against the flu?

Influenza is a serious disease that can lead to hospitalization and sometimes even death. Every flu season is different, and influenza infection can affect people differently, but millions of people get the flu every year, hundreds of people are hospitalized and thousands of people die from flu related causes every year. Even healthy people can get very sick from the flu and spread it to others. Flu season in the U.S. can begin as early as October and last as late as May. An annual seasonal flu vaccine is the best way to reduce your risk of getting sick with seasonal flu and spreading it to others.

Who should get vaccinated?

Everyone 6 months of age and older should get a flu vaccine every season. This recommendation has been in place since February 24, 2010 when the Center of Disease's Advisory Committee on Immunization Practices voted for "universal" flu vaccination in the United States to expand protection against the flu to more people.

When should I get vaccinated?

You should get vaccinated now, if you haven't gotten one already this season. It's best to get vaccinated before flu begins spreading in your community. It takes about two weeks after vaccination for antibodies to develop in the body that protect against flu.

Why do I need a flu vaccine every year?

A flu vaccine is needed every season for two reasons. First, the body's immune response from vaccination declines over time, so an annual vaccine is needed for optimal protection. Second, because flu viruses are constantly changing. For the best protection, everyone 6 months and older should get vaccinated annually.

Can the flu vaccine give me the flu?

While a flu vaccine cannot give you flu illness, there are different side effects that may be associated with getting a flu shot. These are mild and short-lasting, especially when compared to symptoms of bad case of flu. The viruses in the flu shot are killed, so you cannot get the flu from the shot. Minor side effects are: soreness/redness at the site of injection, Fever (low grade) or body aches.

Where can I get a flu vaccine?

Flu vaccines are offered in many locations, including doctor's offices, clinics, health departments, pharmacies and college health centers, as well as by many employers.

The following Vaccine Locator (<http://vaccine.healthmap.org/>) is a useful tool for finding vaccine in your area.
