This schedule is subject to change without notice.

Most employee's pay is spread equally over a 12 month, semi-monthly pay schedule. Therefore, the pay period and number of days worked within the pay period will not have a bearing on the calculation of wages each pay day. The period begin and end dates represent the time frame for additional payroll transactions posted to this payday, such as hours worked for part time hourly staff including substitutes, absentee postings and extra duty pay. These additional postings are expected to be processed on the pay day specified, assuming the information was received timely in the payroll office.
