RIVERVIEW STEM ACADEMY
Home of the Rockets

This month we will begin pulling tips and tricks from a book called The Distance Learning Playbook for Parents, by Rosalind Wiseman, Douglas Fisher, Nancy Frey, and John Hattie. It was written during school closures due to COVID but is full of very good ideas for home-school partnership. The graph this week breaks down responsibilities for teachers and parents. It's such a great reminder of the many roles and responsibilities we have for our students

Teacher	Parents
<ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• Rigor</li><li>• Intensity</li><li>• Standards-based instruction</li><li>• Developmental progression</li><li>• Productive Struggle</li><li>• Growth-Producing relationship</li></ul>	<ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• Love</li><li>• Bonding and connectedness</li><li>• Fun and games</li><li>• Support of the instruction</li><li>• An environment that doesn't feel like school 24/7</li><li>• Experiences that bring the family together in warm, positive ways</li></ul>

Family Mindframe Number 1: I am an evaluator of my impact on my children's learning.
Impact is a powerful word. The question is, did your efforts to ensure that your child learned something actually result in learning?

Take action:

- Ask your child what they learned and not what they did.
- Help your child monitor their progress toward goals.
- Have discussions about what they understand success could look like as they begin an activity.
- Talk more about the learning than the grades. Celebrate the effort and process.

Choose something to learn yourself and model the ways in which you know that you are learning.
