COVID SPIKE

By Reese Sinkevich

We thought it was over. Wrong! COVID-19 numbers are on the rise. Progress on the vaccine is impressive, with the first New Yorker being vaccinated December 14, 2020. We still have to be very vigilant. It is a pandemic, isn't it?

Many schools held COVID-19 tests in December of 2020, including East Islip School District. Fortunately, we only had one person out of 700 who tested positive. Unfortunately, the reason they did the testing was because of a COVID spike on Long Island, and even New York as a whole. Governor Cuomo predicts that something called "living room spread" is the main reason there has been a spike in cases. How it happens is people are uncomfortable going to restaurants and movie theaters, so they host gatherings in their own houses. That creates close quarters, and people's guard comes down because they are in your own home. They are probably not wearing masks.

We all need to stay strong, stay flexible, and stay positive! Until many of us get the vaccine, we are at risk of spreading the virus if we are not careful. A positive attitude is very important too. Instead of saying this virus is the worst, say this virus is difficult, but we will overcome it. And we sure will.

Benefits of Writing and Reading

By Sally Attard

There are many things you can do in your free time. Most often, it is technology related, such as watching TV or playing video games. My first idea, when I am looking for something to do in my free time, is to write.

When I say 'write', I mean creative writing, but it doesn't even have to be that. There are many ways to write. A few examples are journaling, writing poetry, writing sensory details that describe objects in your room, and writing stories.

It can be hard to find ideas of what to write about if you have no inspiration. You can simply write about how Coronavirus affected you. You can make up a story skit with your character's feelings being portrayed due to something similar to Coronavirus. The character's feelings can be what you are feeling.

Writing down your feelings on paper can actually help in some situations. It's easy to do and one of the best things about writing is to look back on your previous writing to see if you've improved. I like to look back and see if I've grown as a writer. Joining the newspaper club at school can help you write more, too.

If you aren't interested in writing, you should at least try reading. Set goals for yourself. For example, you can set a goal to read at least one chapter a day. Make sure you actually read each day, at least one or two chapters.

You don't learn much when you watch mindless TV. Whenever I watch TV or read, I expand on the characters' backstories. There's a lot of fan fiction to read, too.

Reading can get you really far in life. It can boost your intelligence and help you find the right words to use in different situations. If you find the right words to use, then you can truly express yourself.

When you read, it is productive, because you're doing something to help yourself. Literature can be really important in someone's life. You can find what you enjoy in terms of genres. You're exploring through whatever your imagination comes up with. It is a magnificent journey. Reading can also help you find what you enjoy in terms of daily life, too.

In conclusion, reading and writing are very important and beneficial to people. Instead of watching television or playing video games all the time, you should try to include reading or writing.

How homework really affects our mental health

By Ava Sanchez

While homework has its educational benefits such as time management and organizational skills, those can only occur if a student is engaged in the class and ready to learn. The more work, the less inclined an individual would be to want to do it.

Too much homework takes up a lot of time outside of school leaving less time for other things, for those that do the homework in the first place. With so many classes, it can sometimes add up to a binder full of homework leaving us overwhelmed and frustrated. That is when homework's negative effects kick in.

A vast majority of students participate in clubs, sports, or both. Going to meetings, practices and games leaves less time for homework. According to a Stanford University study, 56% of kids said homework was a primary source of stress.

Spending time with friends or family helps refresh our minds but too much homework means less time for that. On top of negative mental health effects, it can have physical effects too, such as headaches and lack of sleep, as well as less time for physical activity. Ultimately, it's the amount of homework that depicts the fine line between positive and negative effects.

NFL Head Coach firings of the 2020 Season

By Michael Kraft

How many National Football League (NFL) head coaches were fired recently? Three within 1 week! Yes, three NFL head coaches were fired in early January 2021. Adam Gase of the New York Jets, Doug Marrone of the Jacksonville Jaguars, and Anthony Lynn of the Los Angeles Chargers. Earlier this season, three other coaches got fired: Matt Patricia from the Detroit Lions, Bill O'Brien from the Houston Texans and, Atlanta Falcons head coach, Dan Quinn. Let's explore the details surrounding each situation.

Anthony Lynn led the Chargers to a 7-9 season in 2020. He was the head coach for the chargers for the past 4 years. He went 33-31 in the 4 seasons he coached for Los Angeles. He signed a one-year extension in the off-season, losing seven games by one score.

Doug Marrone was fired a day after the Jacksonville Jaguars lost to the Indianapolis Colts. The Jaguars went 1-15 this past season which got them the first overall draft pick in the 2021 NFL Draft. That was the worst record all time in franchise history for the Jaguars. Although he still had one year remaining on his contract, the Jaguars parted ways with Marrone.

Adam Gase was fired after the loss to the Patriots. He led the Jets to a 2-14 record in the 2020 season. The Jets CEO Christopher Johnson said that Gase was a brilliant offensive mind at the start of the season. Gase was the Jets coach for only two years despite him having a contract through 2022. Gase had a record of 9-23 in those two seasons he coached for the Jets. The Jets set a franchise record of having a 13-game losing streak.

Bill O'Brien was fired back in October 2020 after the Texans were 0-4. It was O'Brien's 7th season as head coach and he had taken over as General Manager back in January of 2020. O'Brien had a 52-48 record in all 7 seasons he was with the Texans. He also had four divisional titles with the Texans. The Texans never made the AFC conference championship though. The Texans have interviewed 3 people so far for the position: Jim Caldwell, Marvin Lewis and Joe Brady.

Dan Quinn was fired on October 11, 2020 after starting the season with a 0-5 record for the Falcons. The Falcons also fired their General Manager Thomas Dimitroff. It was Quinn's 6th season as a head coach for the Falcons, having an all-time record of 43-42. They made it to the Super Bowl back in 2016 but they lost to the Patriots. So far, the Falcons have interviewed Raheem Morris, Eric Bieniemy, Robert Saleh, and Joe Brady for the position.

Finally, Matt Patricia of the Detroit Lions was fired back on November 28, 2020. It was Patricia's third year as the head coach and his record was 13-29-1 since he took over. Detroit has gone 26 years without a divisional title, last claiming the crown back in 1993. They have not won a playoff game since the 1991 season. The Lions have interviewed Eric Bieniemy, Marvin Lewis, Darrell Bevel and Robert Salah.

That is a summary of all of the head coaches fired this past season in the NFL. Where will they all go? That remains to be seen.

NHL: In the Bubble

By Emilia Cicale

No more sports?

During the months of March and April of 2020, national sports were shutting down due to COVID-19, including the National Hockey League (NHL). While COVID-19 cases were blooming, it was unsafe for crowds to be in a building without masks. As they were just about to head into the playoffs, the NHL decided to close down until the case numbers dropped.

Starting August 1, 2020, the NHL formed a “bubble” in Canada with 24 teams. The eastern conference went to Toronto and the western conference went to Edmonton. As the teams lost games and were eliminated from the playoffs, they were allowed to leave the bubble. Each team was assigned to their own floor at a hotel.

Life in the bubble

The players woke up each morning and headed downstairs for breakfast. Every player also had a COVID-19 rapid test in the morning. It needed to be negative before they could enjoy the rest of their day. Once they got their negative test results, they were free to go about their day with activities in the hotel such as ping pong, swimming, reading, and so much more. There was a documentary made on their everyday life in the bubble called Quest for the Stanley Cup.

Its Game Time

After being stuck in the hotel all day, it was time to play some hockey at night. Teams shared locker rooms so their equipment was switched out with each game. At the stadium, there were no fans, just the players, coaches and referees. Teams who won games continued in the playoffs as usual. If a team lost, they went home to their families.

Towards the end of the playoffs at the finals, the winning team from the Edmonton bubble played the winning team from the Toronto bubble. The playoffs ended on September 28, 2020, with the Tampa Bay Lightning defeating the Dallas Stars four games to two in the Stanley Cup Finals. It was the second Stanley Cup in franchise history for Tampa Bay.

A late but new start?

When the 2019-20 season ended last September, COVID-19 cases were rising so they decided not to start the 2020-21 season as usual in October. On January 13, 2021, it was announced that the NHL will be back in session for the next season but this time, not in a bubble. Not all teams will play each other due to high risk. Let's see how the season goes.

The Amazing Platypus

By Jessica Leek

Imagine you are wandering through the riverbanks of southern Australia, in hopes to see a unique and extraordinary animal. You hear a splash a couple of yards away. You turn your head to see nothing. Then, there is a strange animal gliding across the water. It is what you've been searching for - the platypus.

The platypus is an incredible animal with many special features. For instance, it is one of two monotremes left in the world, besides the echidna. A monotreme is an egg-laying mammal. The platypus has a flat beaver tail, a furry body like an otter and a beak like a duck. People could not believe their eyes when they saw it. They thought a person sewed two animals together as a joke. A typical male platypus is about 15 inches long, and the tail adds about 5 inches. They weigh about 3 pounds.

The webbed feet of a male platypus have pointy spurs on them that carry venom, which makes it one of the few mammals that have this feature. It is not deadly to humans but can cause swelling and much pain.

Platypuses only live in one small area on this earth - the freshwater islands of Tasmania and the southeast coast of Australia. They often dig burrows to live in, which have tunnels that contain chambers, like a house. They are most active at dusk or nighttime, which means they are nocturnal.

Platypuses are carnivores, meaning they eat meat. They scrape their beaks underwater while swimming to try and detect some kind of food. If they find shellfish, insects, larvae or worms, they store it in a pouch in their mouth until they break the surface of the water. Platypuses have no teeth, so they take in as much dirt as possible to help grind the tiny pieces of food in order to digest them.

When female platypuses are ready to give birth, they go inside their burrow, into a chamber and block the exit. They lay one or two eggs and place them between the tail and the body. After 10 days, the eggs hatch, and after 3 or 4 months of nursing, the baby platypuses will swim on their own.

As you can see, platypuses are a very unique animal, and are one of the strangest mammals alive. The list of features is endless. There are so many other amazing animals, so get exploring!

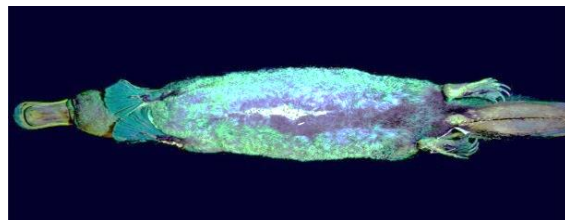

Here are some crazy fun facts about the amazing platypus.

1 - The platypus uses its feet to steer, has waterproof fur, and has skin flaps that cover their eyes, nose and ears while swimming. Cool, right?

2 - Though they are made for the water, they can only stay submerged under water up to 2 minutes.

3 - Amazingly, scientists have proven that the platypuses have a bill that can sense electricity. That's right, electricity!

4 - The platypus' fur is dense and waterproof, so it absorbs ultraviolet light. Scientists recently proved that it releases a fluorescent blue-green light off its fur. How cool is that!

Diving into the internet: Randonautica

By Lee Daubaras

Ever heard of Randonautica? Most likely you heard it mentioned on the news at one point during the early summer or late spring of 2020. Normally, a simple app with no meaning on the surface calls for a rabbit hole, but it's not every day that one of them reaches mainstream news. Allow me to tell you the story, and my opinion, on the Randonautica incident.

It all started in February of 2020 when founder Joshua Lengfelder released an app with quite the backing on its subreddit and other places. This app, called Randonautica, is like a GPS but there is no set location. It is simple to use. I have used it before myself, to get an understanding of what exactly happened on June 20th, the date of the aforementioned incident. It's quite cool, to be honest. You choose between different settings to begin with. After that, it begins to feel less real and more paranormal.

The app encourages users to explore their area and report back on the findings. Apparently, it's truly randomized using, without going into too much detail here, some in depth scientific stuff. Some users have reported actually getting what they thought about before going out to a randomized location set up for people to walk to. It could be anywhere! And that's the problem.

Go ahead, I'll give you a moment to guess what you think is going to happen next.

Thought about it? You probably guessed right.

On June 20th, a few teenagers, whose follow up TikTok video on the incident blew up, used this app. It led them to a place nobody thought would even be possible for a randomized location app. At their destination, directly where the little finish waypoint was, a black suitcase had washed up near some rocks just outside of Seattle. Inside of that, well... I'll get straight to the point - human remains. Of course, this sparked major outrage and a police investigation was called forward. The owner of the app said that the locations are, indeed, completely randomized, so it wouldn't have been possible, or the odds would've been so slim that it could've been a one in a trillion (or more!) chance to find this.

To this date, nobody knows why Randonautica led these teenagers to this mysterious briefcase, and Randonautica owner Joshua Lengfelder's name has been cleared of any wrongdoing. The remains were verified to be two people living nearby before the incident.

It is an odd occurrence, that's for sure, but don't feel like you're going to end up at a secret gang base somewhere if you use this app. In my opinion, it was completely safe, and still is. If you have free time, feel free to download it and check it out, as there's a huge community that's been backing it for months. Also check out the original news stories from last June. They are worth a read too.

Top Video Games of 2020

By Adam Menendez

In this article, I'll be recounting some of the more impactful and popular games of 2020. It is not in any particular list or format style, just writing about the games that I've heard the most about.

I'll start with a no-brainer, that being Cyberpunk 2077. Cyberpunk was a game that was hyped up endlessly. It was marked a classic before it was even released. It's about a city where all of its inhabitants are obsessed with power and glamour. You play as a mercenary outlaw named V who is looking for the key to immortality. The studio that created it, CD Projekt Red, delayed the release of the game a total of three times. Fans began to grow impatient and began to push for the game to be released sooner. It did finally release on December 10, 2020 and it was a good game for PC players. On the three other platforms it released on, it was so buggy people deemed the game unplayable, resulting in very mixed opinions.

Two games that did perform well in 2020 were The Last of Us Two and Spiderman: Miles Morales. Both were sequel games that were praised for their exceedingly good graphics and amazing story. I haven't played Miles Morales, but I have played its predecessor Spider-Man (PS4), which is one of my personal favorites, and I have heard that Miles Morales exceeded that game. The Last of Us Two is a game that has you playing through a post-apocalyptic USA. If there's one thing I've heard about this game, it's that the story is tragic, sad, and masterfully written.

Image from <https://store.steampowered.com>

One game that rose to fame and spread across social media like wildfire was Fall Guys, with its many stages that appeal to people playing online with friends. That game fell in popularity just as quickly as it arrived in light of another online multiplayer game, Among Us, that is still trending a couple months after its boom. Among Us is a game where ten players are grouped on a spaceship and they set out to complete tasks around the ship. If the task bar gets full then the crew wins. But in every game, there are one to three imposters aboard who can kill crewmates and sabotage the ship. If the imposters kill all the crewmates, they win. Everyone on the ship can vote someone off whenever an emergency meeting is called. If all the imposters are voted off, the crewmates get the win. If the imposter is smart enough, they can trick everyone into voting an innocent crewmate off. One can definitely see the appeal of this game in a combination of mind games and fun with friends.

Another game worth mentioning is Ghost of Tsushima. This is a graphically stunning game that has you playing a young samurai who follows a strict code of honor and goes on many quests. The game has a great story and the combat is satisfying and intense. It was a blast watching my favorite Youtubers play it and I probably would have been captivated by it as well if I had it myself.

The last game I want to mention is a role-playing game (RPG) called Hades. It's been described many times as roguelike, meaning that when the player dies, the character dies permanently. You play as the son of Hades, trying to escape the underworld. This list was constructed based on the things that I've heard throughout the internet, but when I did some more research, I found that Hades topped the list in three separate online articles, even though I had never heard of it. It has a great story like The Last of Us does and the great combat of Ghost of Tsushima. Hearing all this praise in my research makes me hope that it will become more popular on YouTube and Twitch so that I can see what they mean when they call it a masterpiece.

Those are the games that I thought I should include. Some honorable mentions also worth checking out are Call of Duty: Infinite Warfare, Animal Crossing: New Horizons, Valorant, and Half Life: Alyx.

Recipe: Strawberry Shortcakes

By Madelyn Halter

SHORTCAKES

1. 2 cups all-purpose flour
2. ¼ cup granulated sugar
3. 2 teaspoons baking powder
4. ¼ teaspoon salt
5. 6 tablespoons (¾ stick) cold unsalted butter, cut into small cubes
6. ¾ cup heavy cream

STRAWBERRIES

1. 1 pound fresh strawberries
2. 1 to 2 tablespoons granulated sugar

WHIPPED CREAM

1. 1 cup cold heavy cream
2. 1 tablespoon granulated sugar
3. 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
4. Powdered sugar, for serving

To make the shortcakes, preheat the oven to 375°F. Line a cookie sheet with a piece of parchment paper.

1 - In a large bowl, whisk together the flour, granulated sugar, baking powder, and salt until evenly blended. Add the butter cubes. Using a pastry blender or 2 butter knives, cut the butter into the dry ingredients until the mixture looks like coarse crumbs, with some chunks the size of peas. Pour in the cream and stir with a wooden spoon until the dough starts to come together.

2 - Sprinkle a work surface with flour. Turn the dough out of the bowl and onto the floured surface and pat it into a disk. Roll it out with a rolling pin, giving the disk a quarter turn now and then, into a round slab that's 1 inch thick. Pat the sides to make them neat. Use a 3-inch biscuit cutter to cut out 4 rounds. Gather the dough scraps, roll them out just as you did before, and cut out 2 more rounds.

3 - Set the dough rounds on the prepared cookie sheet, evenly spacing them apart. Bake until the shortcakes are golden brown on top, 18 to 20 minutes. Ask an adult to help you remove the cookie sheet from the oven and set it on a wire rack. Let the shortcakes cool while you prepare the strawberries.

4 - To prepare the strawberries, put the berries on a cutting board. Ask an adult to help you cut out the stem and core from the center of each berry and cut the berries into wedges. Put the sliced berries into a medium bowl and sprinkle with the granulated sugar (the amount of sugar depends on how sweet the berries are- taste one!). Let the berries stand for 10 minutes.

5 - To make the whipped cream, in a large bowl, using an electric mixer, beat the cream, granulated sugar, and vanilla on low speed until the cream begins to thicken and no longer splatters, about 2 minutes. Raise the mixer-speed to medium high and continue to beat until the cream forms peaks that droop slightly when the beater(s) is lifted (turn off the mixer first), about 3 minutes.

6 - Ask an adult to help you split each cooled shortcake in half horizontally (if your cookies are thin, use two cookies instead) Place the shortcake bottoms on serving plates and spoon the strawberries on top, dividing them equally. Add a big spoonful of whipped cream and top with the shortcake tops. Put the powdered sugar in a fine-mesh sieve, hold it over each shortcake, and tap the side of the sieve to dust the shortcake with sugar. Serve right away.

Madelyn's Review

Personally, I loved them. They were not too sweet, and a great snack if you can put them together. The shortcakes are like cookies and they are very good. If I had to rate them, I would give it a 9/10. I loved them and I hope you enjoyed them too!

3. 1 C shredded cheese

How to make Taco Dip:

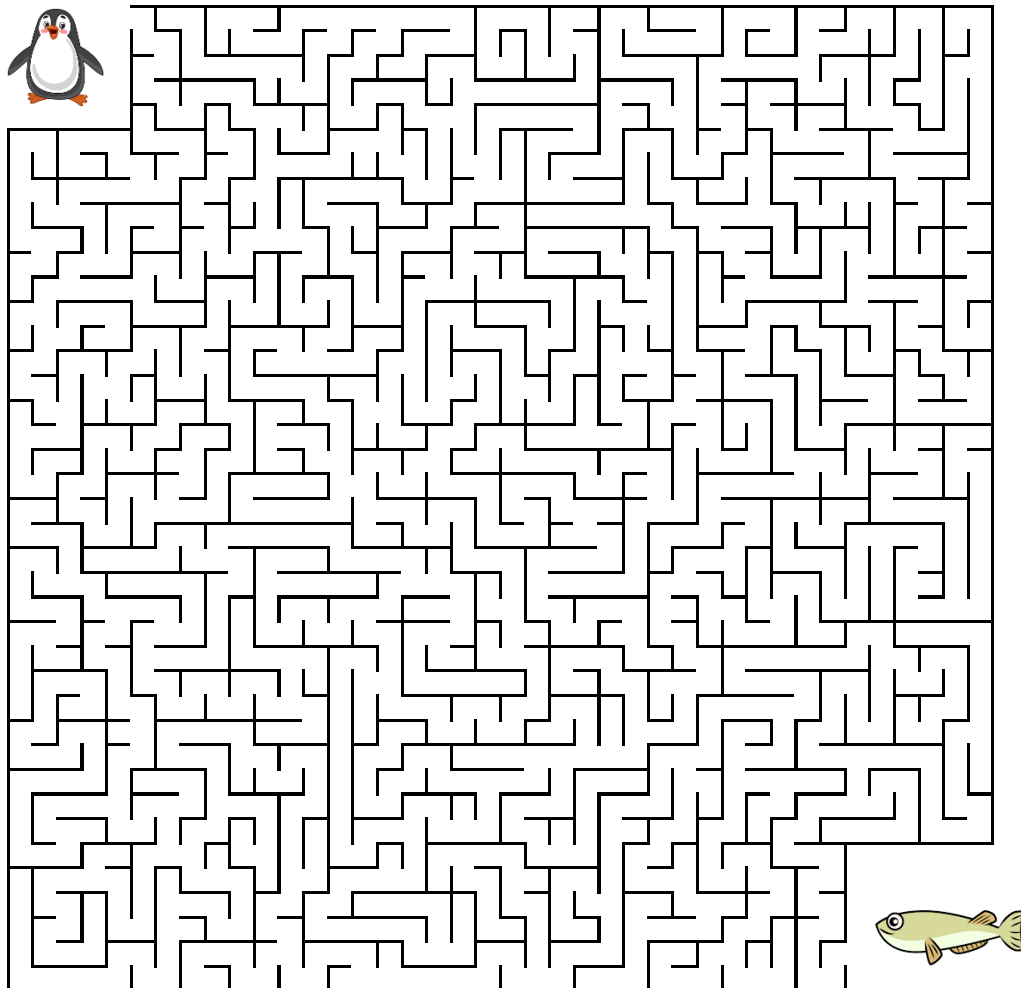

1. First, spread one whole stick of cream cheese on the bottom of your pan evenly.
2. Next, pour and spread the chili on top of the cream cheese.
3. Then, spread the shredded cheese on top of the chili but make sure the cheese is covering the chili.
4. Lastly, put it in the microwave for 4 minutes with a paper towel over the pan. When it is done in the microwave, enjoy it with some chips!
(You can also bake in the oven at 350 degrees for about 20 min.)

My family really likes this taco dip because it goes perfectly with chips and it is also quick and easy to make.
